DE VALERA AND CABINET RESIGN

BEATEN IN CONTEST OVER THE TREATY

Ratification Expected Tomorrow; Griffith Will Probably Be Premier

BULLETIN.

London, Jan. 6.—Eamon De Valera has withdrawn his resignation as president on a mutual agreement that a straight vote will be conducted upon the Irish peace treaty, according to a Central News dispatch from Dublin tonight.

By International News Service.

Dublin, Jan. 6.—Eamon De Valera this afternoon resigned as "President of the Irish Republic" and as executive of the Sinn Fein.

The Sinn Fein Cabinet resigned with De Valera.

The resignations are believed to mark the collapse of serious opposition to the Irish peace treaty in Dail Eireann. A vote on the treaty will be taken tomorrow.

"I resign as chief executive authority and with my resignation goes the entire ministry," said De Valera in a statement to the public.

"When I came out of jail I found Arthur Griffith head of the political section of the Sinn Fein and C. Brughs head of the Irish Republican Army. They differed, and then, as now, I was the connecting link. I believe that Brughs represented the heart of the Irish people."

The Cabinet has tried hard to get two sides into harmony.

"When the treaty was signed in London my task was to end the split forever.

WOULD NOT ACCEPT.

"On October 25 I wrote to London that if recognition of the English King was essential, the Irish would not accept the peace agreement. If it is to be war, I said then it would be better for it to come immediately.

"Griffith broke his promise to me on December 3 not to sign any document pledging allegiance to the King. I believe we could have got a settlement without becoming British citizens."

TO SEEK RE-ELECTION.

"I intend to offer myself to the people for re-election on the lines of the 1918 election. I will want a Cabinet in unison with me if I am re-elected. I will demand that all of the pesources be handed over to me for defence of the republic if I am successful."

A new cabinet will be formed at once. It probably will be headed by Arthur Griffith, founder of the Sinn Fein, and will include Michael Collins, chief leader of the faction supporting the Irish peace treaty.

Dail Eireann took a recess this afternoon, after a secret session, when it became apparent that a compromise between the hostile factions was impossible. A special "peace committee" labored for hours to patch up the difficulties but without avail.

De Valera and his adherents stood out for the counter peace treaty, known as Document No. 2. The followers of Griffith and Collins maintained that the original Irish peace treaty must be ratified in the form in which it was signed.

"When the Irish peace agreement was signed this assembly became

HENRY FORD SAYS HE IS WORTH A BILLION

Bank Balance Exceeds $121,000,000 and Daily Payroll Is Half a Million

By ALLEN L. BENSON.

(Copyright, 1922, by International News Service.)

Detroit, Jan. 6.—Henry Ford begins the New Year with the greatest amount of cash in the bank that any human being ever had. A few years ago Russell Sage with ten or fifteen millions in ready cash used to have this distinction. Two days ago the General Motors Company announced that it had in banks $41,000,000.

Henry Ford's bank balance today is in excess of $121,000,000. He himself does not know within $5,000,000 or $10,000,000 how much actual cash he has at the moment, because he has not taken the trouble to inquire of his son Edsel, the treasurer, since the foregoing figures were given to him a few weeks ago.

"Our balance today," said Ford, "is probably between $118,000,000 and $146,000,000."

Sir Edgar Lost Citizenship After Associating With Him, England Explains

London, Jan. 6 (By the Associated Press).—Allegations as to association with Karl Muck, formerly director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, are contained in a government paper, issued today, explaining why the naturalization of Sir Edward Speyer was revoked.

Among the other allegations are a loan of $5,000 to a man named Ware for the benefit of the now non-existent Boston Journal, Sir Edgar's association with John Koren; his trafficking and communication with enemy subjects and his evasion of the British censorship.

The official report says that shortly after the outbreak of the war Sir Edgar incurred much popular odium, "partly due to his German name and race and partly to the pro-German and anti-British sentimenta expressed by his brother, James Speyer, in New York."

The report recites how he was compelled to withdraw from hospital boards and business undertakings, his children being obliged to withdraw from certain classes in school and he, himself, being in danger of personal violence, causing him and his house to be placed under police protection. This culminated, the report continues, in Sir Edgar's writing to the British Prime Minister in May, 1915, repudiating charges of disloyalty and requesting permission to resign from the Privy Council.

Loan Made "Without Promise," Says Ware

By Associated Press.

Charles E. Ware, Jr., who was formerly president of the Boston Journal, said today that the loan of $5,000 referred to in the British government paper regarding Sir Edgar Speyer, was made "without promise of understanding that could affect the newspaper's policy in any way."

"The money was loaned by Sir Edgar Speyer not to the Journal, or to me, but to John Koren, and by him to me, to keep the Journal going at a time when were were trying to finance it on a permanent basis," he said. It was repaid, with the exception of $1,000. Testimony heard in closed proceedings before a master at New York brought out that the Journal was in no sense a pro-German paper, and was not helping Germany in any way. This testimony was by prominent American citizens, and by strong pro-ally sympathizers."

The New York hearing, Mr. Ware said, was held to assist a British government agent to obtain information regarding the charges against Sir Edgar Speyer.

TELLS OF WOMAN IN DEATH CAR

Witness Harper Testifies for State in Loud Murder Trial at East Cambridge

A new and mysterious factor was injected into the murder trial of Clarence W. Loud in the East Cambridge Court today by Attorney John P. Feeney, counsel for the defense, when he announced that James A. Preston, the slain policeman, had been challenged to fight the day before his murder by a mysterious, unnamed man.

Evidence that there was a woman in the sedan beside which Patrolman James A. Preston was seen standing shortly before his death on April 9 was given today by Robert E. Harper of Wakefield, fifth witness called to the stand at the trial of Clarence W. Loud for the murder of the policeman.

This is the first evidence to that effect the State has introduced and it sent a thrill through the crowded little court room in the East Cambridge Criminal court.

Loud, who had been bent forward in the prisoner's grim dock, straightened up with a jerk as the testimony was given. Then he turned to his wife and smiled. She smiled back encouragingly.

Harper succeeded Edward F. Seabury of Wakefield on the stand. He testified that he had been one of the passengers in Seabury's auto bus the night of the killing of the policeman, that he had seen the sedan.

RECOGNIZED PRESTON.

Seabury had testified that he had caught sight of the first two numbers on the sedan number plate and that they were 9 and and 0. Harper declared that he had been unable to catch the first two numbers as the bus rolled by.

He was positive, however, that he had recognized Preston standing by the sedan apparently talking to some one inside. As the bus passed he caught sight of a vague form in the sedan and was positive that the outlines were those of a woman. Nearby he saw another form, which he was equally positive was that of a man.

Mrs. Loud, looking wan and troubled, came into the room early, accompanied by her young son, Richard Loud, who smiled and made a manifest attempt to appear cheerful.

When Loud entered between his guards, the wife heroically stifled her own depression and smiled cheeringly at him, making a brave and successful effort not to cry.

As Loud took his seat, she swung over to him and greeted him, ignoring the hundreds of eyes fastened upon her face. Then the woman and boy took their seats near the places reserved for the counsel for the defense and the trial proceeded.

When Seabury, the Wakefield bus driver, returned his testimony today, examined by District Attorney Salonstall, he was asked:

"After you returned to the square

As the young woman opened her purse to get her fare Dugan snatched the purse and ran. The purse contained $86.50. The complained to the police, who arrested the today today, and found $53 still in their possession.

Special leections on Tuesday, February 21, to fill the vacancies caused by the resignation of four members of the Legislature, are privoded in a bill filed today by Representative Victor F. Casey of Ward 10, Osgood C. Bigney of Ward 22, Boston; Frank M. Kelley of Newburyport and Edgar A. Bowers of Framingham.

RAZOR IS USED IN FIGHT OVER SWEATER

Augustin Cabera, an oiler on the tug Resolute, which is tied up at the Atlantic Works, East Boston, was held in $10,000 in the East Boston Court today on a charge of assault and battery with intent to commit murder on William Finn, a seaman. Finn was held in $500 as a witness. Members of the crew testified that the men quarreled over a sweater and that Cabera slashed Finn with a razor. At the East Boston Relief Hospital twenty-eight stitches were taken in a cut nine inches long and two inches deep in Finn's side.

IMMUNITY HOPED FOR, HE CHARGES

Defence Also Declares That Coleman, Counsel for Witness, Was Cabot's Lawyer

Senator James A. Reed, counsel for District Attorney Joseph C. Pelletier, made a sensational attack today upon State Witness Robert P. Matches. He said Matches had been "supported" and given money and counsel by those desiring the removal of Pelletier; that he was testifying to something that had been "prepared under tutelage"; that he hoped by his testimony to get immunity from jail under a criminal conviction. Reed further pointed out that the former lawyer of Matches was one Coleman, who, said the Senator, "had been in the employ of Godfrey L. Cabot," Pelletier's enemy for years.

An attempt on the part of the State to prove that District Attorney Joseph C. Pelletier got $5,000 of the $20,500 involved in the celebrated Emerson Motors case featured today's proceedings in the trial of Pelletier before the Supreme Court for alleged misconduct in office.

Reed as "a convicted felon," was the principal State witness.

He said that Attorney Francis M. Carroll of Devonshire street, former fire commissioner of Boston, told him in 1918 that the $25,500 paid by the company when criminal prosecution of the company was dropped was "split three ways."

Matches said he understood it was split $5,000 to Pelletier, $5,000 to Carroll and the rest to Daniel H. Coakley.

He continued that Carroll was dissatisfied with the "split" and thought he should have had as much as Coakley.

Attorney-General J. Weston Allen furnished another sensation when he suddenly charged Attorney Carroll, a State witness in the Emerson Motors case, with being a co-conspirator.

Senator Reed, chief counsel for the defence, complained his share of thrills to a very strenuous session by dramatically stepping in front of Matches, State witness, levelling his finger at him him and saying:

"This man has come here a convicted felon."

Matches is under sentence to serve three years in Atlanta for using the mails to defraud.

Senator Reed grilled Matches mercilessly under cross-examination. The witness maintained that he "saw nothing wrong" in Pelletier's action in 1916, when the whole Emerson Motors case was a live issue, and did not suspect anything until talks with Carroll put suspicion in his mind.

Witness Matches maintained that he had faith in the Emerson Motors stock which got the concern in trouble and that he was sincere when he told Pelletier the company was "all right" and should not be prosecuted.

He was asked if had felt, when he was urging Pelletier to drop his investigation of the company, that he was a party to anything criminal or corrupt. He replied emphatically that he had not.

Senator Reed cross-questioned him in such a way as to show the likelihood that Pelletier acted in good faith and with the public welfare in view throughout the Emerson Motors case.

ACCUSED CARROLL.

Previous witnesses had testified that Pelletier stopped prosecution of the company for "blue sky" operations or dubious advertising because the officials had promised to make changes he suggested and bring themselves within the law.

Attorney-General Allen's amazing charge that his own witness, Carroll, was a co-conspirator in the Emerson Motors came after Reed had manoeuvred so skilfully that there was no other way for the attorney-general to get the court's permission to ask certain questions of Witness Matches.

Reed almost put the words into the Attorney-General mouth when he said this line of questioning could not be pursued unless the State was ready to accuse its own witness of being a co-conspirator.

Shortly after that Allen made the formal charge that Carroll was a co-conspirator.

Carroll as a State witness testified that he was counsel for Robert L. Matches and also for the Emerson Motors Company at the time the deal involved in the charges against Pelletier was on.

He said that $20,500 was paid to settle the matter, that Coakley got $15,500 and he got $5,000.

Allen's dramatic denunciation of his own witness was the first hint that any suspicion rested on Attorney Carroll, one of the best known lawyers in the city.

Matches, records show, was convicted in New York in connection with use of the mails to defraud in exploiting stock in the company and was sentenced to three years in Atlanta Penitentiary.

He has never served that time and Senator Reed promised a searching cross-examination to find out why not.

Reporters massed took the stand Senator Reed bitterly attacked a morning newspaper for what he termed an unfair report of the trial.

He demanded that he be given the right to recall Attorney Francis M. Carroll as a witness to prove the untruth of the newspaper report.

RECALLS CARROLL.

The objectionable statement, he said, was to the effect that yesterday Carroll had testified that one of the terms on which Pelletier promised to drop prosecution of the Emerson Motors Company was that the assets of the company deposit $20,500 in a Boston bank as a fee for Daniel H. Coakley.

Reed said nothing of the sort was given in evidence and that the falsification was "criminal."

He was given the right to recall Carroll and to show that the statement was unjustified.

What Carroll did say was that Pelletier agreed to stop prosecution if the company complied with the laws of the Commonwealth and dropped certain objectionable practices.

Attorney Carroll was then called to the stand.

DIDN'T DISCUSS FEE.

Q.—You testified yesterday with reference to a conversation with Attorney Coakley and your client about the fee that Coakley was to receive. Was the question of a fee that either you or Coakley was to receive ever mentioned in the presence of Pelletier? A.—It was not.

Q.—Was the amount of the fee ever referred to Pelletier in any way?—Not to my knowledge.

Q.—Was the question of a fee that Coakley and you were to receive ever made a condition by which this matter would be settled or prosecution stopped by Pelletier? A.—No.

Inspector Silas F. Waite was recalled.

Q. (By Attorney McCarthy)—Did you make any report to Pelletier with reference to the fee in the Emerson case which the Emerson Motors advertisement declared was owned by that company? A.—I made him acquainted with the title, knowing the land was not owned by the Emerson Company, as alleged.

Q.—Under whose charge do you carry on your investigations outside the State?

On objection by Senator Reed Attorney McCarthy said that the purpose of the question was to show that none of the inspectors could leave the State without the permission of this district attorney. The question was admitted.

MATCHES CALLED.

Q.—Did you tell the court that inspectors could not leave the State without the authority of the district attorney? A.—No.

Q.—All the district attorney had to do with it is that he O. K.'d the bills? A.—Yes.

Q.—(By Attorney McCarthy)—Where do you live? A.—I have been living in Kansas City, Mo., for the last three and one-half years.

Q.—Where were you before that? A.—In New York city about two years.

Q.—And previous to that? A.—I was in Boston from June to November, 1916.

Q.—What was your business while in Boston. A.—I sold Emerson Motors stock at No. 68 Devonshire street. When I first came to Boston I was manager for C. R. Berry & Co., but they suggested that I buy them out and the Robert P. Matches Company was formed.

Q.—What had been your business previous to that? A.—I ran a taxicab company in San Francisco and have built aeroplanes.

"ROTTEN" CONCERN.

Q.—How old are you? A.—I will be thirty-five on the 26th of this month.

Q.—Did Attorney Carroll have charge of the incorporation of your company? A.—Yes.

Q.—Before it was formed had you prepared any literature in connection with the sale of Emerson Motors stock? A.—Yes.

Q.—Had you been in touch with the Emerson Motors Company? A.—Yes. I met Hupp and Emerson about a week before I came to Boston.

Q.—Did you investigate the company? A.—Well, I didn't investigate it as much as I should have, perhaps.

Senator Reed: I object.

Attorney McCarthy—I asked this because I wished to show that Pelletier's lines of information were wide open and in investigating the advertising of the company he could easily have gone to the source. He could have found out about the Emerson Motors Company, which was a rotten concern. The company was not prosecuted, and it should have been.

M'CARTHY INDIGNANT.

Senator Reed—What may be a good speech to make in the newspapers, but it has no reference to the question the witness has been asked.

Attorney McCarthy (indignantly)—I do not make speeches to the newspapers.

A.—I got the information mostly from Emerson, Hupp and Wilson, three of the auditors of the company.

Q.—When did you begin to insert advertisements in the newspapers? A.—About a week later.

Q.—When did you put them in? A.—June 16 and June 26, 1916.

Q.—How long did you continue to advertise in the papers? A.—Until September 10 or 15.

Q.—Did you eventually hear rumors of an impending investigation? A.—Yes. On September 22.

Q.—What happened? A.—Inspector George J. Farrell came to my office.

VISITED BY FARRELL.

Q.—Did you visit your office at No. 68 Devonshire street? A.—Yes.

Q.—What did Inspector Farrell say to you? A.—He asked me, first, about the Robert P. Matches Company, and then about the Emerson Motors Company. He asked about the accounts and advertisements of both companies and circulars. I showed him what I had. He told me he thought it was all right. The following day I went to the baseball game. Toward the latter part of the game my office manager came to where I sat. He said three of my salesmen were waiting outside to see me. I went out with him and found Mahoney and two other salesmen. Mahoney told me Inspector Farrell had been to the show room on Boylston street.

Q.—What number Boylston street? A.—I don't remember. It was a vacant building I had rented.

Q.—Near the Hotel Lenox? A.—No. Opposite the Copley-Plaza. There were ten cars built which the Emerson company placed among the various agents interested in the financing of the concern.

Q.—How long were these cars allowed to be with an agent? A.—A week or two? A.—That's the idea.

TIPPED BY NUGENT.

Q.—How long was a model car allowed to remain with you? A.—Two or three weeks.

Q.—What happened next? A.—The following Monday I called on Attorney Carroll and told him an inspector had called at our show room.

Q.—When did you hold the conference with Carroll? A.—September 25.

Q.—What talk did you have with him?

Senator Reed objected. The question was allowed.

A.—I told Carroll that Farrell had been looking up matters.

Q.—What next happened? A.—Three or four days later I received a telephone message from Nugent, my advertising agent.

Q.—You got information from Nugent? A.—Yes.

BRING INVESTIGATED.

Q.—As a result what did you do?

A.—Went to Attorney Carroll again and said I felt we were being investigated. I told him he had better look matters up and see what was going on.

Q.—What did you hear next? A.—The following day I received another telephone message to the effect that there was no question we were being investigated and that Pelletier had sent a man to New York.

Q.—Where did your information come from? A.—The same source, Nugent.

Q.—Had you heard from Carroll? A.—Yes. I talked with him and he said he had been advised that an investigation had been made but it was a casual investigation.

Q.—What next? A.—I received a telephone message to protect myself, that my office was going to be raided any minute. I went to see Carroll again.

CALLS MATCHES A FELON.

Q.—What did you do as a result of his advice? A.—I telephoned New York to Emerson and Wilson and asked what was doing there.

Q.—Did you do anything with reference to your own bank account?

Q.—What did you do after you telephoned New York? A.—I saw Carroll and he said he had done all he could.

At this point, when Attorney McCarthy tried to get the details of the conversation between Matches and Carroll, Senator Reed objected with a show of heat and thrilled the spectators when he suddenly confronted Matches, and, levelling his finger, said: "This witness has come here a convicted felon."

Attorney McCarthy—You have no right to say that.

Senator Reed—You know it and I know it. He is under a mittimus from the court, and should be in the Atlanta Penitentiary. How he is here we don't know.

Attorney McCarthy—I ask that this highly reprehensible statement by Mr. Reed be stricken from the records. He has made it, not for evidence, but for other purposes.

Chief Justice Rugg—There should be no imputation of the motives of counsel. The question of whether this witness is a felon or not has not yet been presented to this court. It may be, eventually. It will have nothing to do with the competence of this evidence. If it be shown that these are the facts it may have a bearing on the testimony of the witness.

After a conference among the five justices the question which brought on the clash was allowed.

Q.—What conversation did you have with Carroll?

Senator Reed—With due courtesy to the court I now seek information. I did not offer this line of evidence which was testified to by Attorney Carroll, a State witness. If I had I would have opened the door to this line of inquiry. What I wish to know is whether it is the practise in this State to admit incompetent evidence if by chance such a line of evidence by a previous witness has not been challenged. Does that render the testimony of another witness competent?

TOLD OF INDICTMENT.

Chief Justice Rugg—The court has admitted this evidence and its ruling does not apply to this point. It gave the ruling for the evidence to stand, not because it affects Pelletier and Coakley, but because it has a bearing on Carroll's testimony.

Q.—What did Carroll say to you?

A.—He told me he had called Coakley on the telephone and that Coakley was busy, but later called the district attorney's office and found that an investigation was pending. He said Coakley said he did not think it was a serious matter, but would let Carroll know more that afternoon. Later that day Carroll called me to his office again. He said he'd seen Coakley again and that Coakley, in turn, had seen the district attorney again. Coakley told Carroll he was sorry, because the grand jury was in session and an indictment had been returned against the Emerson company.

Q.—Did you telephone to New York as a result of what Carroll told you concerning his later conference with Coakley? A.—Yes. I telephoned Amos Stevens, chief counsel for the Emerson Motors Company. He came to Boston next day, October 3, 1916. He came to my office about 2:30. I told him what had happened. We went to Carroll's office. Carroll told Stevens what Coakley had said. Stevens said he thought it would be better to go to Coakley and get it first hand. Carroll told us Coakley was the best criminal lawyer.

Senator Reed objected to the reference to Coakley.

Chief Justice Rugg—What is the purpose of this inquiry, Mr. McCarthy? Does it vary from what Attorney Carroll testified?

Attorney McCarthy—It deals with the character of Coakley, who was played up relative to his reputation. It leads up to what happened before fees were divided.

Chief Justice Rugg—The court feels that Carroll covered this ground by testifying to what Coakley said to them.

Q.—Who attended that conference in Coakley's office? A.—Mr. Stevens, Mr. Carroll and myself. Mr. Carroll introduced Stevens and me to Coakley. Coakley said we fellows seemed to have "got into a hell of a mess." Stevens wanted to know what he meant. Coakley said he learned from Pelletier that there was an indictment before the Grand Jury, which was then sitting. He didn't know how he could stop it. He said Pelletier had said to him (Coakley) "Please lay off the Emerson outfit."

Q.—Did Pelletier mean for Coakley to lay off A.—Yes.

Q.—Then what happened? A.—Stevens told Coakley about the company. Coakley said it was too bad such evidence had not been presented before.

Q.—Did Coakley say anything further? A.—Yes. He wanted to know what the company had been doing and what deposits it had to date.

Q.—Were the advertisements of the company discussed? A.—Yes. Stevens and I told Coakley about the business.

THOUGHT FEE LARGE.

Q.—Did Stevens ask Coakley if it was possible to stop the indictment? A.—Yes. Coakley said he was a close friend of Pelletier and he could ask favors of the district attorney's office other people couldn't. He said he was responsible for keeping Pelletier in office. He said he was either his campaign manager or something else. He said he didn't like to take cases to court and referred to how he had lost a murder case a short time before, and it made him feel so badly he liked to get a case out of court.

Q.—What was said about fees? A.—Carroll asked Stevens if he would like to discuss fees with Coakley. Stevens asked him how much of a fee Coakley would demand for using his influence with the District Attorney's office. Coakley said he would need $500 retainer and would demand that $20,000 be deposited in the bank or in Carroll's hands as a contingent fee. Stevens told him he thought it was a large fee. Coakley said he couldn't go to the District Attorney's office very often and when he did go he thought he ought to be paid for it.

WARNED BY PELLETIER.

Q.—After the interview in Coakley's office was there a meeting in Pelletier's office? A.—Stevens asked Coakley if he could meet Pelletier before going to New York and Coakley made an appointment over the telephone. We went to Pelletier's office. Pelletier said: "I thought you were not going to mess with this affair," speaking to Coakley. He continued he thought Coakley was going to "let him go ahead." Coakley said he had learned a lot of facts from Stevens and he knew Pelletier had not received the facts as he had and wished him to hear them. Pelletier didn't seem to want to listen, but he did so. Stevens told him he understood an investigation by the Grand Jury was underway and he wanted to tell him, Pelletier, the true facts. Stevens then related that while the company did not own the property in New York, it was only because there was some difficulty about a sur-tax. Stevens also said that Hupp, an expert automobile man, was with the company.

Q.—Was Hupp really connected with this company?

Senator Reed—I object.

Attorney McCarthy—I intend to show by this question that the district attorney did not follow all the lines of investigation that he could. If all Pelletier did was to sit back and listen to these men's talks he did not make a sufficient investigation.

MRS. STILLMAN AND INDIAN GUIDE BEAUVAIS MEET IN FROZEN NORTH

CONFER IN RUDE PINE SHELTER

Three Rivers, Que., Jan. 6.—In the lobby of a rude pine and shingled little north woods hotel, in this picturesque country, the gateway to the country of ice and snow, Mrs. Anne U. Stillman and Fred Beauvais met for their first time in two years.

The meeting was entirely devoid of dramatics. She had informed newspapermen she would meet her former guide.

"Fred wants to help. I am sure he is sincere. After all, he is almost a defendant in this case. Why shouldn't I see him and accept his assistance?"

She pulled out moccasins from her big silk bag as the train approached Three Rivers and donned them. On arriving she called to Jean Crete of Grandes Piles, who was waiting at the station:

"Let walk to the St. Louis Hotel, monsieur. Coming back into your country sends the currents of joy coursing through my veins."

While her baggage was piled into a sleigh, she, Crete and her American lawyer, Philip J. O'Brien, began the mile trudge to the St. Louis. On the way townsfolk, who had known all day that Fred Beauvais was in town, peeped from behind blinds.

REGISTER AT LITTLE HOTEL.

At the plain little hotel Mrs. Stillman and her party registered. Then Fred stepped into the lobby and said quietly:

"How do you do, Mrs. Stillman?"

She smiled, extended her hand and said:

"Hello, Fred."

They shook hands cordially. Then they climbed up two flights of stairs, where four rooms had been reserved for Mrs. Stillman's immediate party. Mrs. Stillman was assigned room No. 56. Crete got No. 58, Beauvais No. 59 and O'Brien No. 60.

"Come up stairs, you people, and let's get to work," dictated Mrs. Stillman. Soon she and the three men were grouped about a big table in the corridor on the third floor of the little hotel.

GUIDE PRODUCES PHOTOS.

After this the four went into a conference that lasted almost all night. Fred produced photos intended to corroborate the ladder and keyhole witnesses. He gave the names of additional witnesses he had found.

At dawn Beauvais started for Shawnigan Falls, thirty miles north of Three Rivers. He traveled by sled, expecting to subpoena three witnesses.

This afternoon the party will entrain for La Tuque on the northern rim of the Stillman lease territory, here Mrs. Stillman expects to talk with a dozen prospective witnesses and arrange for their departure for Montreal next week.

From La Tuque, Beauvais and Crete will start down the St. Maurice valley by sleigh. They will cover the Bat River and Grand Anse section.

Stillman Refuses to Pay Costs; Hearing Off

By Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 6.—The Stillman divorce suit hearing set for Montreal next week will not be held because James A. Stillman, the plaintiff, refuses to pay $7,500 costs of the action by his wife, it was announced today by Cornelius J. Sullivan, chief of counsel for the banker.

John F. Brennan, head of Mrs. Anne U. Stillman's legal staff, said that unless the money was paid, the effort to take testimony of Canadians next week would be abandoned. This procedure was stipulated in the order for the expense money signed by Supreme Court Justice Morschauser at Poughkeepsie, and appealed from in Brooklyn by the plaintiff.

DRUG USERS GIVE SELVES UP TO POLICE

Driven to desperation by the Boston American anti-narcotic drugs campaign, Tobias Thompson and Peter J. Higgins, both of them giving Back Bay addresses, surrendered themselves to Special Officers Bresnahan and Manning at City Hall avenue station today, and were locked up charged with having hypodermic needles in their possession.

They told the officers they were without money or drugs and that, rather than steal they had decided to give themselves up to the police.

Both were in bad shape and told the officers they had been suffering from lack of their daily drug allowance, which they had been unable to buy because the Boston American's campaign had deprived them of their source of supply.

FORD SAYS HE IS WORTH BILLION

ply to a question he told me today that he had no doubt that his holdings, based upon their earnings, could be capitalized and sold for a billion dollars.

Ford gave me this information because I asked for it. Neither his mind nor his conversation runs to money. I am sure money means less to him than to any other rich man I ever knew.

"My property," he continued, "consists of about $100,000,000 worth of buildings, $100,000,000 worth of machinery and something more than $100,000,000 in cash.

"As a going concern, I have no doubt that these assets could be capitalized and sold for a billion dollars, but this $121,000,000 or whatever it is that we have in the bank means nothing to me except a tool with which to work. I might liken it to the flywheel on an engine, the belt from a motor to a machine, or to the wire that feeds electricity to a trolley car.

"A big balance is required to keep our wheels going. We pay wages amounting to $500,000 a day and our materials cost us $750,000 a day. Our bank balance is, therefore, sufficient to pay our operating expense for only about 100 days.

"All the money that comes to me goes into new industries. I never invest money in bonds or anything of the kind.

"What I want is to make this a better country for all of us to live in. That is why I want to get a chance to go to work at Muscle Shoals. I see the government is going to have a third bid for Muscle Shoals, by the way.

DOWN THE MISSISSIPPI.

"I wonder if the politicians are playing their old game of complicating a situation for the purpose of killing a plan by delaying action upon it. Well, if they keep me out of Muscle Shoals I will try to get a chance to put some dams on the Mississippi.

"They cannot bar me out of all the water power sites in the country. I am going to get in at a number of places. It is to the public interest that the wasted water power of this country should be saved. Enough water power is going to waste to heat, cook and furnish light for all the people in the country.

"But I don't want Muscle Shoals or any other big power site for the purpose of owning it. If I get Muscle Shoals I shall contrive a plan by which it eventually become the property of the government without cost and serve the people forever while bringing profit to the government."

GIRL TELLS HOW SHE WAS WON BY BLACK

Case Is Settled Out of Court After Her Story Is Heard

Miss Clara Leavins, Everett nurse, who is suing Howard Black, Boston representative of the Wilmington Fibre Company, for breach of promise, took the stand in her own behalf in the Suffolk Superior Court today.

After she had finished her oral testimony and a letter to her from Black, which he had identified, had been read, a recess was taken. Black and his attorney went over the letters and then offered a settlement, which Miss Leavens and her counsel accepted. Miss Leavens, smiling happily, said to a reporter, "I am satisfied. I've got what I wanted and I've licked him."

When the court convened again the case was formally withdrawn.

Miss Leavins' testimony related to her meeting Black in 1915, and of his subsequent love-making and abandonment of her. She told of her suffering an operation upon his insistence, of his first declaration of love amid sylvan surroundings, of his subsequent coolness, and of his woodland wooing after this estrangement.

"I first met Mr. Black at a rooming house on Massachusetts avenue, where he roomed and where I was staying for a short time between nursing engagements.

WENT TO MOVIES.

"A week later he asked me to go to the movies with him, and I met him near the Kimball Building on Tremont street to keep the engagement.

"Subsequently we went to theatres, dinners and other places together. I always met him at his office in the Kimball Building, or on the street nearby.

"It was nearly two years before he declared his love for me. We had taken the Worcester trolley one pleasant May day and went for a walk in the woods near that city. He then told me that he loved me and said that he was only waiting until his salary was sufficient to support me before he asked me to marry him.

"He both wrote to me and said to me that he would marry me as soon as he could support me. Once I went to New York on a case and he came over to visit me and told me then that he loved me.

"In July I went to several Boston physicians, whose names were suggested to me by Mr. Black. He accompanied me to the door of each of the doctors, but did not go in with me.

"Finally, after unsatisfactory interviews with three physicians, I went one to a doctor on Washington street, Mr. Black, as before, accompanied me to the door. After an operation I was sick a month in a Boylston street rooming house. Mr. Black visited me and wrote to me.

"In the Fall of that year we went out in the country on a week-end automobile expedition. In the woods he again told me of his great love for me, and repeated his promise to marry me."

Before Miss Leavins went on the stand Black was in the court room, counsel for the complainant, to identify sixty-two letters. These letters are alleged to have been written by Black to Miss Leavins. Black acknowledged that the signatures were his and that the letters were written on his office stationery.

TELLS OF "OTHER WOMAN."

"While I was employed as a nurse in Wellesley," Miss Leavens testified, "Mr. Black invited me to attend the Pop concert with him on evening of May, 1919. I came into Boston and waited for two hours on the corner where he was to meet me.

"Then I went to his rooms on Massachusetts avenue. The landlady objected to my coming in, but I pushed past her. I knocked on the door of rooms on the door of Mr. Black's room. Finally he came to the door.

"Looking over his shoulder I saw a young woman, scantily clad, in a room. Mr. Black shut the door and came out into the hall. He looked terribly to me. Then he took the tickets we were to use for the concert, tore them up and threw the bits in my face.

"Mr. Black told me I got what I deserved for coming where I was not invited. The door was then closed and I asked him what he meant by such actions. He replied: 'I'm through with you.'

"When I asked him about the woman who was in his room, he said she had come from Brockton after noon and had called at his office to borrow an umbrella, and he had been unable to get rid of her the rest of the day."

The first of sixty-two letters which figure in the case was then read. It was written by Black, said Miss Leavens, the day after they had quarreled over the woman from Brockton. Black, it said, didn't want anything more to do with Miss Leavens. He didn't want to phone or write to her.

ATLANTA POLICE HUNT FOR COMPTON'S SLAYER

Atlanta, Ga., Jan. 6.—The killing of J. Russell Compton, business man and social leader, who was shot to death here late yesterday in an alley back of a factory, remained a mystery today while detectives searched for the assailant and sought the motive for the slaying. Compton apparently had just backed his automobile out of a garage in the alley when a bullet was fired through his back of his head. The pistol was found on the rear seat of the machine where the slayer apparently was seated.

"They cannot bar me out of all the water power sites in the country. I am going to get in at a number of places. It is to the public interest that the wasted water power of this country should be saved. Enough water power is going to waste to heat, cook and furnish light for all the people in the country.

FISHING VESSEL IS WRECKED AT NANTUCKET

Nantucket, Jan. 6.—The new power fishing vessel Doris, fifty feet long, was the craft wrecked south of here as reported in radiograms yesterday. It was learned today. She struck in thick weather. Captain Paul Matheson and his three brothers, who constituted his crew, launched their dory safely, but got a wetting when the dory was smashed in landing. The brothers lost virtually everything they had with the vessel, which was valued at $10,000 and was not insured.

POLICE FORCE SHAKEN UP IN LYNN

Chief, Figurehead for 4 Years, Is Restored to Active Control by Mayor

In one of the most important shakeups in the history of the Lynn police department, Thomas M. Burckes, the seventy-four-year-old chief, who has been a figurehead for the past four years, was restored to active control today.

In an order issued by the new mayor, Harlan G. McPherson, the superannuated veteran was reinstated, and Deputy Chief Edward D. Callahan, who has been running the department, was reduced to command of the First Division. Captain James H. Broad, who has been in command of the day division, was transferred to the Second Division, which goes on duty early in the morning, following the tour of the First Division.

Patrolman Henry Hazen, who was house officer of the first division, was detailed to a route in the outlying section of the city, under the new order. This order, which is said to have been aimed at supporters of former Mayor Creamer, also gives the chief of police control of the vice squad, which was commanded by the deputy chief.

Deputy Chief Callahan succeeds the late Captain Stacey H. Burckes, son of the chief, who died a short time ago.

SAW KISSING IN NELSON'S HOME, FRIEND SAYS

Wife Hugged Former Soldier, Black Testifies in Divorce Suit

Henry E. Black, a friend of the family, testified today in the East Cambridge Divorce Court to seeing Mrs. Effie Nelson, who is contesting her husband's suit for divorce, hugging and kissing Charles Robertson, service man and son of a Woburn leather manufactures, whom Carl Malcolm Nelson, of Everett, names in his libel.

"I slept one night in the front parlor of the Nelson's home in Malden," Black testified. "Mrs. Nelson and Robertson were in the same room. I saw them hugging and kissing. Mrs. Nelson said to him, 'Always be careful to pull down the window shades.'"

Black said that following the adjournment of court yesterday, Mrs. Nelson, after striking at her husband with her fists, threatened him (Black). "Let me alone. I might not treat you as gently as your husband has treated me."

Mrs. Elida Nelson, mother of Carl Nelson, testified today. She said:

"My daughter-in-law told me she planned to marry Robertson after she was divorced. I went to the house several times after my son filed his suit. Robertson always came to the door to let me in during a period of six weeks. On the pillows of one of the beds I saw the imprints of two heads."

Edward Nelson, brother of Carl Nelson, said he had seen Mrs. Nelson and Robertson at an address on West Thirty-third street, New York.

John A. Sweeney, owner of the house where the Nelsons once lived, said that he had received a number of complaints and that he had told Mrs. Nelson she must not have so many men calling at the house.

MAYOR TO ATTEND UNVEILING OF STATUE

Mayor Peters will leave tomorrow for Greenwich Ct., where he will attend the unveiling of a statue in memory of his brother-in-law, Colonel Raynal Cawthorne Bolling, who was killed in France, December 26, 1918. Colonel Bolling was selected commander of the first air unit organized by the New York National Guard. He was later commissioned a major when United States entered the war. He was sent to France to investigate aircraft production in Europe. General John J. Pershing is expected to attend the ceremonies with the mayor and Mrs. Peters.

WOULD ABOLISH BUSHEL MEASURE IN SALES

A report recommending the abolition of the bushel measure and requiring the retail sale of all fruits, vegetables and grain by the pound or by numerical count was today made to the Legislature by a special commission headed by the State Commissioner of Standards Francis Moredith. Only fruits and vegetables in the original packages, however, would be allowed to be sold except by the pound or count. Both the retail dealer and the consumer are now defrauded by short-weights, the Commissioner said.

TWO SHOTS FIRED AS SUSPECTS FLED

Lee Orr of Summer street, Charlestown, and Robert M. Elroy of Medford were in the Charlestown district today charged with breaking and entering with attempt to commit larceny at a garage on South Eden street, Charlestown, and were held in $500 each for the grand jury. The garage is owned by Patrolman Charles M. Lamb. Patrolman Bitts said he discovered two young men at the door of the garage, but that both got away, although he fired two shots in the air. He later arrested Orr and McElroy. Both the accused said they were at home at the time in question.

Second Mate of Princess Troubetzkoy Will Be Witness for First

PRINCESS TROUBETSKOY

War-Time Marital Tangle of Russian Noblewoman Takes New Twist

The strange war-time triangle between former Princess Nadjeda Vasilievna Troubetskoy and her two living husbands, Captain Victor A. Turin, former Russian agent in the United States, and Captain Wallace S. Schurtz of Milwaukee, has taken a new twist.

Nathan Ullman, attorney in the Kimball Building, Boston, and counsel for Captain Turin in the latter's suit for divorce from the ex-Russian princess, has admitted that he is going to call as one of Turin's witnesses the Princess' second husband, Schutz, as a witness against the combination wife.

FLED FROM RUSSIA.

Three years ago Princess Troubetskoy was one of the most-sought-after and feted women in the United States. Daughter of a Russian noble, she had fled from Russia when the revolution threw that country into disorder and massacre to her family and friends.

In this country she went into Red Cross work and was assigned to duty at the Naval Hospital in Washington. Then society took her up, and at one of the most fashionable homes in the national capital she met Captain Victor A. Turin.

The captain then still was agent for the Russian government and had been buying supplies for his government in this country. He was enormously popular and reputed to be very rich.

The Princess' Slav temperament flamed under the courtship of the captain, and they were married here in Boston on October 31, 1917. Society turned out to do them honor. Washington, New York and Boston feted them. The press told their story over and over again.

WAR INTERVENED.

And then war intervened. Captain Turin was sent overseas, and a few months later back from the front came the report that he had been killed overseas.

The bride-widow-princess put on mourning, but only for a little time. Captain Wallace S. Schutz of Milwaukee, enormously rich, good looking, a club man of the Wisconsin city and a social favorite in Washington, came as a bright, glittering star into the firmament of the princess.

Captain Schutz also loved the woman, who was said to have been the most beautiful Red Cross nurse in war service. While he was still pursuing her from afar came the news of Turin's death.

And that is why the "widow" failed to wear weeds long.

Her marriage to Captain Schutz was even more brilliant and gayer than had been her union with Turin.

The couple went to Milwaukee to live, and there in October, 1920, Captain Schutz learned through a friend in New York that Turin was very much alive and back in this country, employed as a movine picture actor.

ARRANGED FOR MEETING.

The friend, a woman, arranged for a meeting between Schutz and Turin at her New York home. At that meeting, to which the Princess, beautifully gowned, came as a disinterested third party, it was agreed that to straighten out the marital tangle Captain Turin was to sue for divorce.

After the meeting and the resulting agreement Princess Troubetskoy, Turin-Schutz disappeared from society's ken. She later was located in Montreal at the home of a friend, where it was announced that she had suffered a nervous breakdown.

And on the heels of this announcement came from Milwaukee the report that Captain Schutz, after brooding over the discovery of a husband of his wife, whose commission, so to speak, antedated his own, had decided to sue for divorce on his own account.

His only statement regarding the affair was, "I was a sucker—but I'm all."

The Princess sees her story from a different viewpoint.

MOURNS HIS MISTAKE.

"I abandoned my religion—the pursuit of beauty—when I married the Princess. That was a mistake, and I mourn the day I made it.

"When we told me that she believed me dead when she wed Captain Schutz I replied, 'You did not weep long for me, and I'll not weep for you.' Ah, women—their memories are so short."

FIGHT TO BAR CURIE FROM FRENCH ACADEMY

Paris, Jan. 6.—The anti-suffrage movement is concentrating on an effort to prevent the election to the Academy of Sciences of Madame Curie. The name of Madame Curie was proposed by a committee of members on the ground that her scientific discoveries are unequalled by men. The committee petitioned the academy to abandon its time honored rule to admit only men. Yesterday combating this petition many members of the academy have given notice that they will resign if "feminine influence is permitted to degrade this noble society."

CITY OIL WELL STARTS MONEY TO TREASURY

Long Beach, Calif., Jan. 6.—A municipally-owned oil well, heralded as a possible tax eradicator, started the flow of finances into the city treasury today when a contract was made by Long Beach with an oil company for sale of 15,000 barrels of oil. The price was $1.21 a barrel. The well is producing between 300 and 350 barrels a day, having been drilled by a private corporation on city ground. The city gets 40 per cent of the oil produced.

HUGHES SAYS IRELAND MUST BE FULLY FREE

John T. Hughes, State street lawyer, speaking before Roger Casement Council, A. A. R. I. R., on the Treaty of London, now before the Dail Eireann, declared the only solution of the Irish question was complete and absolute independence. "If one generation betrays this ideal, another will redeem it," he continued. The sentiment was cheered by the meeting which was held in St. Rose Hall, Worcester street.

The following officers were elected: President, Jeremiah Carroll; vice-president, Edward Doherty; recording secretary, Margaret M. Roche; corresponding secretary, Thomas F. Johnson; financial secretary, Agnes Campbell; treasurer, Helen Daly; sergeant-at-arms, Patrick Sheehy.

DENIES GRAFT IN SCRAMBLE FOR MOTOR PLATES

Registrar Goodwin Says the Charges Have Been Fully Investigated

The charge that employes of the State Registry of Motor Vehicles engaged in petty grafting during the last day rush for auto plates at Commonwealth Pier on Saturday was today denied with indignation by State Registrar of Motor Vehicles Frank A. Godwin.

"Boys, men and girls of this department were accused of 'tapping' the long lines of persons waiting for their plates and of accepting money for placing late arrivals in advance of those who waited one and two hours in line," said Goodwin.

"The charge has been thoroughly investigated by Chief Clerk Gilley of this department. The waiting lines were solicited, he found, but not by employes of this department.

"A firm known as the Massachusetts Motor Registry Service furnished men and boys to stand in line and their places were sold to the later arrivals. The charge, I understand, was $1 per place."

Goodwin was today requested by the authorities of Connecticut to ask the police to suspend the arrests of Connecticut drivers minus their 1922 number plates until January 16. There was numerous complaint in Connecticut, Goodwin was informed.

ALLIES TO CALL ECONOMIC CONFERENCE

Germany and Russia Are to Be Invited to Participate in Meeting

Cannes, Jan. 6 (By the Associated Press).—The Allied Supreme Council today approved unanimously the calling of an international economic conference, to be participated in by Germany and Russia.

Prime Minister Lloyd George has decided there can be no question at the time of a financial alliance between France and Great Britain, it is said on good authority, but has held out the prospect of a sufficient guarantee to aid France if she is again attacked, as in 1914, under certain conditions.

These are, it is stated, that France co-operate with Great Britain in the economic restoration of Europe and consent to reasonable delays in the reparation payments by Germany on the basis of the suggestions made in the recent London conference of a half billion gold marks in cash and a billion gold marks in kind instead of two billion in cash.

ELEVEN COWS DIE IN DEDHAM FIRE

Eleven cows were suffocated today when the barn of Mrs. Tamsin Baldard on High street, Dedham, was destroyed by fire. Mrs. Baldard's flock of hens were also thought suffocated in the cellar, but an hour after the flames were extinguished the bedraggled flock reappeared from the ruins.

The fire was discovered by C. E. Tuttle, caretaker for the Animal Rescue League's premises nearby. The police believe it was set by some tramp who sought a night's lodging in the haymow.

The loss was estimated at $5,000, only partially covered by insurance. Mrs. Baldard did not know the barn was on fire until the arrival of the fire apparatus.

DEAD VETERAN IS FOUND IN HOSPITAL

Springfield, Jan. 6.—Albert Kilwaxa, missing World War veteran, for whose arrest the police and Polish residents of Indian Orchard had been searching for two days, was found this afternoon dead in the Springfield State Hospital, where he has been since October 3. Walter Cieplik, eleven years, said that he had helped to bury a man at a spot off the Boston road. When questioned by her cold of having been given $1 to aid an Italian to bury a body of a man and stuck to the details of his account. The search lasted all of one day and part of the night.

Q.—What else was said? A.—Pelletier said the car in the show window cost $1,000 to make, and I told him a model always cost more than the cars did when quantity production was reached. Pelletier told me if I thought I was going to come to Boston and "clean up" I was very much mistaken. I said I thought the business was legitimate and that I had a great deal of faith in the company. Pelletier said he didn't like my advertisements because wrong inferences were being drawn from them by the public.

Q.—Was anything said about an impending indictment? A.—I don't believe the matter of indictment was discussed in Pelletier's office.

Q.—Was anything else said? A.—I offered to pay an engineer to go to New York and investigate the company. Pelletier said he had already sent a man to New York to investigate and that the man had reported. I said the man knew nothing about mechanics. Pelletier replied he had great faith in the man and that he had been a mechanic before he joined the police force.

IN CLOSE TOUCH.

Q.—When you went out did Pelletier say anything to Coakley. A.—Pelletier asked Coakley to keep in close touch with him and let him know what the company was going to do.

Q.—What did Coakley say after you left Pelletier's office? A.—He said he had made an arrangement with Pelletier to hold matters up until Stevens returned from New York.

Senator Reed asked permission to ask Matches one question, as to the whereabouts of his counsel, Attorney Coleman of New York. Attorney McCarthy objected.

Senator Reed—"I seek information that is not in the record."

Matches said Coleman is out of the city.

Q.—Where is he?

McCarthy—I object.

Reed—I think the State should be ordered to give this information.

ALLEN OFFERS AID.

Attorney-General Allen—No request has been made upon the State for this information. Such a course would have been the proper one. The State will gladly help the respondent to locate any witness he desires, but has no control of witnesses out of the State. My brother knows that Mr. Coleman is a lawyer in New York city.

Reed—I wish the information in order to subpoena the witness.

Q.—Was anything further said by Coakley about the $20,500 fee. A.—Yes. Coakley told Attorney Stevens that if the Emerson Motors Company had agreed to any terms the money must be brought in cash and not by check.

Q.—What further was said by Coakley? A.—Coakley told Stevens that he was glad that he had interviewed Pelletier, and that he need not worry, as the matter could be held up. If urged Stevens to make all haste in coming back from New York to Boston.

"AS COAKLEY WISHED."

Q.—Was anything said by Coakley as to the effect of Stevens' statement on Pelletier?

Senator Reed objected.

The witness was permitted to reply that Coakley said that he was glad Stevens had laid the facts so that Pelletier could "do as Coakley wished."

Q.—"Do as Coakley wished?" A.—Yes, in this matter.

Q.—What else did Coakley say? A.—He said it was necessary to stop advertising the sale of Emerson Motors stock in Boston, and was told that that could be easily arranged.

Q.—Who said that? A.—I believe I said that. Stevens said he would hurry back from New York, and he did.

Chief Justice Rugg: "How is that competent?"

ABSOLVES CARROLL.

Chief Justice: "Can you support this with any authorities?"

McCarthy: "Yes. I have an authority here which states that the question of a conspiracy is one to be determined by the court after all the evidence is in. It is not necessary to name co-conspirators, but we wish to call attention to the fact that 'Coakley and others' are named in our bill of information. When I say this, I wish to have it understood that there is no implication against Attorney Carroll.

Senator Reed—I submit that the State cannot offer this evidence unless it charge Carroll with being a co-conspirator. The State cannot stand on any equivocal ground. The State cannot offer evidence concerning a co-conspirator unless it is not willing to make a charge against that co-conspirator.

Attorney-General Allen—The evidence is being introduced. Upon this evidence the co-conspirators may be shown. We are offering evidence which relates to this plot.

Chief Justice Rugg—On the statement made in behalf of the informant this statement is included.

ACCUSES PELLETIER.

Attorney McCarthy—Did you have a talk with Carroll as to how this fee of $20,500 would be divided?

Senator Reed—I object because the same questions are involved.

Chief Justice Rugg—Question excluded.

Attorney McCarthy—We intend to offer evidence later that when this money was deposited there was a cash deposit of $5,000 made by Pelletier in his own account in bills, and we will show later the subsequent conduct of Carroll and the developments generally indicate there was a division of the fee and that Pelletier got part of it. Under the original agreement Coakley was to have gotten one-half. We feel this question is justified.

Attorney-General Allen asked that the case be suspended for a few minutes to give counsel for the State time to consider. Permission was given.

Senator Reed—I do not wish to have this statement go unchallenged. Such statements, when sent out to the public as facts, are very damaging. I am here to protect my client so far as lies in my power. This whole matter was excluded before the Boston Bar Association.

Attorney-General Allen—I ask that the reference to the Bar Association be stricken from the records.

Chief Justice Rugg—The court feels this is immaterial and it will be disregarded.

Attorney-General Allen—In view of the fact that it may be published—

Chief Justice Rugg—We are not trying the case on anything arising outside the courtroom.

While Senator Reed remained standing, ready to argue, Attorney-General Allen conferred with Attorneys Dodge and McCarthy and after a minute or two arose and said to the court:

"The State wishes to name Attorney Carroll as a co-conspirator."

Q.—After you left Coakley's office you say you went downstairs with Stevens and Carroll. Did you have any conversation with Carroll? A.—Yes. Carroll said the Emerson Company would see the matter in the right light and would understand the necessity of a quick answer. He impressed on me very forcibly that we were very fortunate to have Coakley interested in the enterprise as he seemed to be.

Q.—Was there anything further said about the fee? A.—Yes. I asked Carroll if he didn't think the fee was a large one. He said he didn't think so. I said I thought half the amount would be a big fee. He said we should understand that this was a serious matter, and that the fee would have to be split in several ways. I asked Carroll if it was in the fee in the nature of a bribe and he said no, it could not be considered in the nature of a bribe, but rather as political influence, that it was a question of going and pulling strings and getting what you wanted.

Q.—Was anything said about secrecy? A.—He said I was not to tell anyone, not even my wife.

Q.—Did you see Carroll after the money was paid? A.—I saw him on October 4 and he showed me a deposit slip for the $20,500.

Q.—Did you have a talk on the 4th with Carroll? A.—Yes. He told me he had seen Coakley and had a personal talk with Pelletier and Pelletier had advised him that nothing further would be done.

Q.—Did you ask Carroll what fee he got? A.—Yes. He got $5,000 and gave Coakley a check for $15,000.

SPLIT THREE WAYS.

Q.—What did Carroll say in response to your next question? A.—He stated he should have gotten as much as Coakley, but that the check "had to be split three ways." He said $5,000 was for himself, $5,000 for Pelletier and $10,000 for Coakley.

Q.—Was anything said by Carroll regarding further payments to him? A.—He said he would expect me to get another $5,000 for him.

Senator Reed took Matches for cross examination:

Q.—Where were you born? A.—Newark, N. J.

Q.—Were you ever engaged in any promotion enterprise before you came to Boston? A.—No.

Q.—Have you ever engaged in the sale of stocks before? A.—I sold stocks in an enterprise of mine in San Francisco.

Q.—What was it? A.—A taxicab company.

Q.—What was the name of the company? A.—The Gray Taxicab Company.

Q.—Did you manufacture airplanes also? A.—Yes. I was president of the Andermatt Company.

MET WILSON.

Q.—What became of the taxicab company? A.—The Yellow Taxicab Company took it over.

Q.—How long were you in New York before coming to Boston? A.—About two or three weeks.

Q.—When you came to Boston, had you any business arrangements here? A.—Yes. I had talked with Wilson of the Emerson Motors Company.

Q.—Had you met him before you met him in New York? A.—I met him in a casual way when I was invited to a dinner by a friend of Wilson, named W. L. Loomis.

Q.—You engaged in selling stock when you came to Boston? A.—Yes.

Q.—All sorts of blue-sky stock? A.—What do you mean?

Q.—You know what I mean. You've had enough experience. Don't you know? A.—No.

Q.—The company were you connected with when you came to Boston? A.—I was to be manager of the C. N. Berry Co.

Q.—Who owned the company? A.—Wilson.

$50,000 CAPITAL.

Q.—Did this company, the Richard Company, ever build any autos? A.—Yes, a few. They were very high-priced cars.

Q.—You knew that company never existed as a good faith company for a moment? A.—No.

Q.—Is the company still going? A.—I don't know.

Q.—When you started the Robert P. Matches Company, who was in the corporation beside yourself? A.—My secretary and bookkeeper.

Q.—These parties were merely nominal? A.—Yes.

Q.—What was the capital stock? A.—$50,000.

Q.—Was it paid up? A.—No.

Q.—Was there a dollar paid up on it. A.—I had assets—my office furniture, a mailing machine and a bank account.

Q.—What was all the furniture worth? A.—$1,000.

Q.—Did you ever turn it over to the Matches Company? A.—I would have to look at my books.

$20,000 IN BANK.

Q.—How much money did you have in the bank? A.—About $20,000 in the Shawmut National.

Q.—In your own name? A.—No. In the name of the Matches company.

Q.—That was the same bank account from which you drew money out when the company was in trouble? A.—Yes.

Q.—You put it in yourself and then drew it out yourself? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you know anything about the Emerson Motors Company before you went to New York? A.—Yes.

Q.—You understood that Hupp was vice-president of the company, didn't you? A.—Yes.

Q.—And that Hupp was back of the Hupmobile car? A.—I was led to believe so.

Q.—And that is a very good machine? A.—Yes, but the credit is now due to Hupp.

I EARNED LATER.

Q.—But you did not know that at the time you sold the stock? A.—No. I learned it two years later at the Emerson Motors trial.

Senator Reed took up the names of the various men connected with the Emerson Motors Company, according to advertising, and asked Matches if he believed at the time he sold stock for the company that the men were actually connected with the concern. Matches said that in every case he had believed the list of names in the advertisements to represent the truth.

Q.—You knew that Stevens was chief counsel for the Emerson Motors Company. A.—Yes.

Q.—You knew that he was an attorney of high standing and unquestioned reputation in New York? A.—Yes.

Q.—The personnel of the company was commented on in your advertisement? A.—Yes.

Q.—And the personnel was discussed at your conference with Pelletier? A.—Yes.

HONORABLE MEN.

Q.—You made the statement to Pelletier that they were all men of high standing. A.—I said that myself.

Q.—You wished to give Pelletier the impression that the Emerson Motors Company could not be a bad and wicked concern? A.—Yes.

Q.—You all agreed that forcibly on Pelletier. A.—We did.

Q.—Did you learn in New York arrangements had been to build or acquire a new factory, similar to the picture published in your advertisements. A.—Yes.

Q.—You told Pelletier that all of the directors of the company were highly honorable business men. A.—Yes.

Q.—Who sent you this picture of the factory for reproduction? A.—Mr. Emerson.

Q.Did you believe that statement to be true? A.—I did.

Q.—Did you believe the various representatives made by the company to be true? A.—Yes.

Q.—When did you change your mind? A.—After I had telephoned to New York. After Inspector Farrell had been to my office.

GOT NEW SITE.

Q.—Why did you mention the factory in that conversation? A.—Because Farrell had said something about it, with reference to the ads.

Q.—So you got your first intimation from Inspector Farrell? A.—I believe I did.

Q.—Who did you talk with over the phone? A.—Wilson.

Q.—Did you learn from Wilson that they had abandoned the factory idea? A.—He told me there was trouble over the railroad stocks and that they had decided not to go ahead with the building.

Q.—So told you the only difficulty was the company's disappointments on side tracks, but the company was going to acquire another site? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you think then that the factory was a good faith representation and that an equivalent had been arranged for? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you inquire whether a machine could be made for $395 before going to Boston? A.—I had read a statement by Mr. Hupp.

Q.—Did you have confidence in it? A.—Yes. At that time.

Q.—Did you have confidence in that statement when you talked with Pelletier later? A.—I did.

Americans Must Know More About Japan

THE MUTSU

Japan's newest and greatest battleship, regarded as the popular symbol of Japanese naval progress and aspirations. The pride of Japanese naval architects. Reported to have been built largely by the pennies of millions of Japanese children and the voluntary sacrifice of Japanese laborers. Japan is permitted to keep this battleship when the plan of naval reduction is carried into effect.

THE GREAT EMPIRE OF THE PACIFIC

Called into world life by an American Commodore, seizing with avidity upon many new things for its advancement from western civilization, protesting undying friendship for the United States, but struggling with seemingly irreconcilable differences, developed by marvelous leaps into one of the five greatest naval and military powers of the world, and now to become a signatory partner with us and with Britain, France, and Italy in preserving "peace on earth good will toward men,"—it is imperative for every American to know more about this great Ocean Empire of the East, and to know what has happened in the Seventy Dazzling Years since Commodore Perry knocked at the Mikado's fast-locked door and summoned Japan to take her place in the family of nations. Try to answer the following questions:

DO YOU KNOW

What is the attitude of Canada, Australia, and New Zealand toward Japan?
How much new territory Japan has annexed in the past 26 years?

How big an army Japan could raise on short notice?

DO YOU KNOW

That Japan, which had no dealings with the outside world before 1853, is now one of the world's great commercial powers, with the fourth greatest merchant fleet and a foreign trade of $2,000,000,000 a year?
That Japan, which had no banks, no financial system, no credit, in 1868, now has a strong and elaborate financial system with great banks and stock exchanges, holds a billion dollars worth of gold and has such credit abroad that she has been able to borrow over $750,000,000 from foreigners?

DO YOU KNOW

What Japan's naval strength is?
What are the qualifications to vote in Japan?
What is the real business of the Regent?
What restrictive laws has Japan against foreigners?
About woman's rights movement in Japan?

Full information is provided concerning Japan's Army and Navy, her Government, parties, and politics. There are illuminative articles on Japanese literature, art, poetry, and drama, her life and customs, her psychology, religion, science, and history, and the condition of women, of labor, and of childhood, with scores of other subjects that make this number indispensable to all who wish to be correctly informed regarding Japan.

WITNESS AT LOUD TRIAL TELLS OF SEEING WOMAN IN DEATH CAR

and made your report to the police did you again go to the scene of the murder?"

Mr. Feeney objected and Mr. Saltonstall changed the question somewhat.

"After you spoke to Officer Butler and Officer Gates, did you go again to the scene of the murder?"

Again Mr. Feeney objected.

Q.—You talked, as Mr. Feeney says, to Officer Butler when you got back to the square at the end of your 9 o'clock trip? A.—I understood you yesterday, you left Wakefield square a few minutes after 9 o'clock bound for Montrose? What time did you get back to Wakefield square? A.—Nine twenty-five o'clock.

Q.—When was it you spoke to Officer Gates on Lowell street? At the time you talked to Officer Gates, had you talked with a man named Libby? A.—No.

Mr. Feeney was much irritated as the question was answered while he was on his feet making an objection.

ATTORNEYS IN TILT.

Saltonstall warned the witness not to answer his questions until Feeney had an opportunity to object. Feeney objected and claimed Saltonstall was asking leading questions. Saltonstall protested he was doing his level best.

"If that's your best, I should hate to see you at your worst," retorted Feeney, and the spectators laughed at the reply.

Q.—Describe how Officer Preston was lying when you saw him. A.—He was lying with his head toward the street and his feet toward the wall.

Q.—How long did you stay there? A.—Until the body was removed.

Attorney Feeney then began cross-examination.

Q.—How many officers did you talk with that night with relation to this case? A.—I don't understand the question. Can you make a little clearer?

SALTONSTALL SUSTAINED.

"How many police officers did you talk with that night as to the occurrences of that night?"

The District Attorney objected and was sustained.

Q.—Who were the officers you talked with? A.—Officer Butler, Officer Gates and Officer Joe Preston.

Q.—Did you tell Officer Butler that the numbers on the car commenced with "20—"? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Who was the next officer you talked with? A.—Officer Gates.

Q.—Are you sure that you have no recollection of talking with any other person between the time you spoke with Officer Butler and Officer Gates? A.—Yes, sir. I talked with other persons.

Q.—You had told Butler you had seen Officer Preston standing behind the Ford sedan? A.—I did not tell him that.

Q.—Did you say when you saw Mr. Preston that he was standing on the running board of a Ford Sedan? Did you say that Officer Preston beckoned for you to come on with your bus and that he had an electric torch in his hand? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Did you tell Officer Butler that you saw a Ford sedan on Lowell street? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Did you tell him that you saw Officer Preston standing on the running board? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Did you tell him that Officer Preston beckoned for you to come on? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Then the best you can say was that Officer Preston was standing in the road? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Why didn't you tell Officer Butler that you saw Officer Preston standing on the street?"

District Attorney Saltonstall objected. Mr. Feeney said: "I think I have a right to show that he did not tell Officer Butler the same story he has told here."

Q.—Did you ever tell Mr. Tufts on any occasion that you saw the first numbers of that number plate and that they were "20——"? Did you ever tell Chief Pollard? Did you ever tell Mr. Harper? Did you ever tell any one? A.—Yes, sir.—Officer Gates.

Seabury admitted he heard no shots the night of the murder.

CAUGHT AUTO NUMBERS.

Robert E. Harper of Wakefield was the next witness. He said he was at Water and Lowell streets when the 9 o'clock whistle blew on the night of April 8. He was with Seabury in the bus.

As they approached Beebe's Lane, Harper said he saw Patrolman Preston leaning near a sedan. He said he was told later what the first two numbers on the sedan were. Seabury had testified he caught the first two numbers, 20——.

Harper testified that he returned to the spot later when he heard of the murder and remained forty-five minutes.

He saw a form sitting in the driver's seat, and, by the shape of the hat, thought it was a woman; nearby he saw another form which he thought was that of a man. He did not recognize either person.

He said Jim Preston had one foot on the running board of the sedan, when he and Seabury went by in the bus.

Q.—Would you say for certain that you saw a woman in the car? A.—I would.

Q.—The party whom you saw in the car was sitting in the driver's seat? A.—Yes.

Q.—When you got out of the bus, was that the time you learned that there had been a shooting? A.—It was.

Q.—How long did you remain there after you heard there had been a shooting? A.—About fifteen minutes.

HARPER RESUMES STAND.

Questioned by Attorney Feeney as to the hat he saw, presumably on a woman, sitting in the front seat of the sedan in Beebe's lane, he said it had a broad brim.

He said he didn't know from whom he heard the number "20—" mentioned as a part of the number plate on the sedan.

Q.—Were you at the Wakefield police station the next day with Seabury, when you were questioned about the car number? A.—Yes.

Q.—Officer Gates asked you about the numbers on the car? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did Gates have a note book? A.—No; several sheets of paper in his hand.

Q.—And in substance Gates asked you if the first two numbers were "20"? A.—Yes.

MANY WOMEN PRESENT.

A large number of women were present at the afternoon session than on any day of the trial. Many were gray-haired.

"Haven't you heard Seabury or others say that he had said something about other numbers?" Harper was asked. "I don't think so," he replied.

Q.—From the ninth day of April you never heard Seabury say what those numbers were? A.—No, the first time I heard Seabury mention the numbers was in the District Attorney's office about a month ago.

Q.—At any time did you hear any shots? A.—No, sir.

Q.—At any time did you see a fleeing car? A.—No.

Q.—At any time did you hear any screams? A.—No.

Harper said he was three feet from Officer Preston when he passed by in the bus. He said Preston was about three feet from the sedan and the rear light was burning.

Q.—Did you say anything to Mr. Preston when you passed? A.—No.

Q.—And that was the last you saw of Mr. Preston? A.—Yes—alive.

ORDERS JURY OUT.

Q.—Do you recall the day before of a man challenging Preston to a fight? "What do you mean to show by that?" asked Judge Brown, "What is your plea, self-defense?"

"Oh, no," said Attorney Feeney, shaking his head.

District Attorney Saltonstall objected and entered an exception.

"We have been informed by reputable and reliable witnesses that on or about 9:15 or 9:30 on the night of the murder, a man was standing near the stone wall in Beebe's lane snugly before Preston's body was found.

FIGHT SUGGESTED.

"We have been informed that days before and at the same hour, that same man appeared. We have been informed by witnesses as to the looks, conduct and actions of that man.

"We have been informed that the day before the murder, Preston and another man had become involved in a serious argument. We are informed that Preston offered to go out in the woods and fight it out with this man."

District Attorney Saltonstall opposed the admission of the "threat" testimony.

"If his defence was to be an alibi," said Saltonstall, "that his client was elsewhere, then he might possibly argue that someone else than this defendant did the murder.

"But to allow a mere threat to be put in, and this before he admits the presence of Mr. Loud at or near the place of this crime, is clearly inadmissible."

Judge Brown then took down several law books and started to look up the law on the points in question.

To Put on Good Firm Flesh and Round Out Your Face and Figure

Get a FREE $1.00 Package of Genuine Yeast Vitamine Tablets Today as Explained Below—Try Them for Ten Days and Watch the Results

Science has at last shown how we sometimes grow weak, thin, and emaciated on an abundance of food (lacking in vitamines) while with a much smaller amount of food, rich in vitamines, we may quickly take on good firm flesh, increase in weight, and make a remarkable gain in strength, energy and endurance, provided your blood contains sufficient quantity of oxygenated organic iron to enable your body to assimilate your food properly.

Without organic iron both food and vitamines are absolutely useless as your body cannot change lifeless inert food matter into living cells and tissue unless you have plenty of organic iron in your blood.

For centuries scientists tried in vain to make organic iron. At last the problem was solved so that you may now obtain pure, organic iron like the iron in your blood from any druggist under the name of Nuxated Iron.

It has been arranged to give every purchaser of Nuxated Iron, who wishes to put on flesh or increase weight, a large regular $1.00 package of Genuine Yeast Vitamine Tablets absolutely free. HOW SINN FEIN WOMEN FIGHT FOR IRELAND

The following is the fourth in a series of articles by W. G. Fitzgerald on the inside story of the Irish-British treaty.

Sinn Fein's Vision of Ireland's Glorious Rebirth

By W. G. FITZGERALD.

Written expressly for Universal Service.

ARTICLE IV.

Dublin, Ire., Jan. 6.—Ireland has not a single naval ship to her credit. What could be her motive then for seeking an anti-British alliance?

To win her freedom has been the single object of seven centuries' agitation. To retain it when won must be Ireland's supreme object. And this is impossible without the good will of Great Britain. The instinct of self-preservation, if nothing else, dictates the common sense of friendly relations, to say nothing of economic and commercial interests being identical.

Now one word about the women of Sinn Fein who are up to their bright eyes in the movement. The work of their White Cross Society is well known to all. In a recent manifesto the women declared: "We rank with the world's bravest our gallant men, who fight against tremendous odds in the face of all the resources o. a mighty Empire. We glory in their heroism under torture and in their deeds of valor in the field."

A typical Amazon was Nurse Linda Kearns of Sligo, who was recently sentenced to ten years by a court-martial at Belfast for the possession of arms. But Miss Kearns and three of her sister prisoners made a successful dash for liberty from Mountjoy Gaol, by means of the usual rope ladder the waiting automobile, and other accessories of these dark and thrilling adventures.

"What they do is this," remarked General Macready to me, speaking of the women guerillas. "Surrounded by a group of civilian men, women and children, somebody fires at the Crown forces or hurls a Mills bomb with practised skill.

WOMEN HIDE PISTOLS.

"When automatic pistols are used these are passed along to the women with rare sleight-of-hand. Then, of course, when we search the men they are quite unarmed. And the petticoats and 'undies' of the women are an embarrassing defence for Sinn Fein Ireland with which we can never tackle without defeat."

So a geared and organized nation was ready for the tornado of blood and flame which a stray shot would surely have loosed during the forlorn hold-up of five trucs which Lloyd George had in mind as a thing of infinite suspense. Railways were to be destroyed in every direction. There was to be a general gaol delivery with those of the warders conniving. British troops were to be lured and ambushed on a great scale.

Unsuspecting groups were to be killed by invisible foes or destroyed by land mines, prepared by I. A. R. officers who knew the dreadful game from A. to Z.

Organized labor was to be both active and passive in the national war under the redoubtable Tom Johnson of Dublin. No wonder Britain's Prime Minister shrank from this terrible prospect—"I want the Houses of Commons to face it squarely before it embarks."

And Eamon De Valera replied at a mass meeting in County Clare: "We know what can be done." I heard him say, "by the enormously powerful nation. We know the terrorism; we know the savagery that can be used against us. But we defy it!"

"We stand guard," Cathal Brugha told me, "ready for Britain's blacker and damndest. Aye, ready—if not to 'stagger humanity,' in Paul Kruger's famous phrase, then at least to show that we Irishmen who live are worthy of those who died!"

BLACK CARD OF WAR.

Such were Sinn Fein's plans for the Black Card of War. It is an amazing fact that simultaneously with these terrible preparations plans were all laid for the serene rebirth and regeneration of the Gaelic mother land on a stupendous scale. I ought to explain that young Desmond FitzGerald had flooded the earth with Ireland's claim to complete sovereignty. It seemed impossible to accept anything short of the full measure. This accounts for the present dismay and disappointment which falls like a dark mist on millions of the people from Cashel down to Kerry.

But Art O'Connor at the Department of Agriculture, Sean Etching ham of the Fisheries, Ernest Blythe of the Trade and Commerce Bureau, O'Kelly of Education, Cosgrove of the Local Government, and Robert Barton, the ex-British soldier now in charge of Sinn Fein's Economics—all these had visions and dreams of a new found power surging up out of the Irish Sea as the full-panoplied god that sprang from the brow of Zeus.

But this was more than a mere vision, far shrewder and solider than any dream. Ages ago Lord Bacon styled Ireland one of the richest areas in Europe. Even Macaulay in the famine time of '48 saw the Emerald Isle "in a position of matchless facility for universal commerce." How many of us realize that in a single year Britain's trade with Ireland totaled $06,000,000 pounds—or more than that of France, Italy Japan and Switzerland put together.

VITALITY IS STAGGERING.

Indeed the vitality of the country is a staggering thing. In the last century there were four general and twenty-seven partial famines. In seventy years over two million people died of hunger or plague in Ireland; three and a half million more took to the emigrant ships. Between 1840 and 1911 Britain more than doubled her population, whilst that of Ireland—with a far-higher death rate—was all but halved.

All this is over—or so a sobered Ireland hopes. The new note is sounded by Arthur Griffith himself—that tired man who now calls for the aid of all sections of the Irish nation in raising the structure and shaping the destiny of our new Free State.

Secret developments have long been afoot which will introduce the new world power with astonishing repercussion upon the prosperity and trade of Great Britain herself as well as foreign nations.

For six years Irish emigration has all but ceased, and reconstruction has been quietly planned by far-seeing men on practical and sweeping lines.

BUFFALO'S 'WET' MAYOR SHAKES UP CITY

Moves to Reduce Number of "Soft Drink" Places From 6,000 to 1,000

By Associated Press.

Buffalo, N. Y., Jan. 6.—Frank X. Schwab, former brewer, elected Mayor of Buffalo on a beer and wine platform, is carrying out pre-election pledges with a speed that is causing "dry" advocates to wonder how he will proceed with respect to the main question of prohibition.

Mayor Schwab has announced that all "dry" laws will be enforced and has asked the corporation counsel to draft an ordinance that will enable him to reduce the number of licensed soft drink places from 6,000 to 1,000.

In the first week of his administration, Mayor Schwab retired the prohibition enforcement and vice squads of the police department, installed a police chief of his own choice whose first love was a general shakeup of subordinates; scrapped the police reserves, and unpaid civilian organization formed during the war, and called together an advisory committee of one person from each of the city wards.

The Advisory Board, Mayor Schwab promised in his campaign speeches, would keep the city government in touch with the plain citizen and tax payer.

The Advisory Board, so far as announced, is divided as to occupation thus:

Former saloonkeepers and owners of soft drink places, five; doctors, four; manufacturers, three; insurance and real estate, two; contractors and financiers, two; railroad executive, one; union business agent, one; lawyer, one; poolroom owner, one; editor, one, and undertaker, one.

CONSTIPATION OFTEN POISONS THE SYSTEM

NATURE HAS PROVIDED RELIEF

For every violation of her laws Nature exacts a penalty; but she also has wisely provided relief, especially for the ailments of the human system. Since constipation is the most common of ailments, Nature endowed certain herbs, seeds, barks and leaves with laxative properties. Early settlers, dependent entirely upon Nature, used the extracts from these plants to relieve and correct constipated conditions.

Seventy years ago, an old-fashioned Maine country doctor who didn't believe in harsh cathartics originated a prescription known as Dr. True's Elixir, the True Family Laxative, which since has given relief to many thousands of constipation sufferers. It is composed of extracts from herbs and seeds; it acts mildly, pleasantly, positively; it helps to correct the cause naturally and relieve its attendant evils; it purifies the bowels as it cleanses and helps to restore normal action.

Here is one of the thousands of cases where Dr. True's Elixir has helped. "As you have been a Godsend to me, that is a friend in need is a friend indeed' I will write and tell you about the value of your medicine—Dr. True's Elixir; believe me, it helped me. I eat every thing that comes along, no more diet. I even tried raw onions for a test. Is that not luck after nine long years of only milk and eggs?"—Mrs. J. E. (Nutley, N. J.)

To have a suitable laxative, one which she knows will prove effective, be easy to take and guaranteed pure, Mrs. Peter Velma of North Charleston, S. C., sent up North. She says: "I have great faith in Dr. True's Elixir, the True Family Laxative and Worm Expeller, and have been using it for over ten years. I send for it to my old home at Oxford, Me."

A well-known New York writes: "While visiting in historic old Plymouth (Mass.), my family became acquainted with your Dr. True's Elixir, the True Family Laxative and Worm Expeller. It does all you claim for it in aiding digestion and relieving insomnia and constipation. Please ship me six large size bottles for mother is in need of it."—Wm. I. Ralph.

Dr. True's Elixir, the True Family Laxative, was first a Maine medicine then New England, now International 40c—60c—$1.20.

The place is that of guard at the city's reservoir. Oles today advised all city employes, however, to "be economical, because it doesn't look as if you'll get any pay for a while."

The Mayor warned soft drink establishments, which were refused licenses, that they must close by Saturday night. About seventy-five were refused perm is because they had been convicted of violating prohibition laws.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

Debutante Dance Tonight for Miss Priscilla Clapp

By BETTY ALDEN.

THE debutante affair on this evening's social calendar is the dance in honor of Miss Priscilla Clapp at the University Club.

Preceding the dance, Mrs. Henry L. Hall of Commonwealth avenue will entertain at dinner in honor of her debutante daughter, Miss Anna Hall, and Miss Clapp. The guests will include the young men who are to serve as ushers at the dance for Miss Clapp. Both girls are members of the Junior League—provisional members, that is—and as such have served at various charity events this [illegible]

Miss Hall will have a tea with dancing given in her honor next Thursday afternoon at the Hotel Somerset from 4:30 until 7 o'clock. Miss Hall's mother and her aunt, Mrs. Henry Lyon Hall, are arranging the tea-dance for her. Later in January, another aunt, Mrs. Samuel G. King, of Marlboro street, will give a small luncheon and theatre party in honor of the young debutante.

While on the subject of deb affairs it would seem quite odd not to say a few words about the large ball which Mr. and Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney gave in their Fifth avenue mansion in honor of their debutante daughter, Miss Barbara Whitney. For the Whitney ball was a most distinguished affair. Only those possessing unchallengeable social prestige were invited to attend.

The 800 guests included not only the buds and their men friends, but the younger and older married sets as well. Which meant, of course, that a brilliant corps of Vanderbilts graced the gala occasion with their presence. Mrs. Whitney, as everyone knows, was formerly Gertrude Vanderbilt.

The guests, on their arrival at the Whitney residence, were received by Mrs. Whitney and her daughter at the entrance to the hall room on the second floor, which is one of the largest rooms of its kind in the city. It is hung with beautiful tapestries, and needed nothing in the way of additional decorations. The conservatory adjoining was decorated with apple blossoms, creating quite a unique and Springlike atmosphere. American Beauty roses adorned the entrance and the adjoining rooms.

A few of the many people who came to pay homage to the young debutante—the latter, by the way, was charmingly gowned in white satin and crystals—included the following: The Count and Countess Laszlo Szechenyi (Gladys Vanderbilt), Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Miss Grace Vanderbilt, Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, 2d; Miss Consuelo and Muriel Vanderbilt, Miss Cathleen Vanderbilt, Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey Depew, Mrs. August Belmont, Mr. and Mrs. Craig Biddle, Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Astor and Mr. and Mrs. Martin W. Littleton.

Mrs. James Cunningham Gray, who numbered among the busiest workers for the Red Cross during the recent war, has not given up her interest in that organization by any means, for she has accepted a place as volunteer worker on the Women's Back Bay Committee, of which Mrs. Richard M. Saltonstall is chairman. The committee is a part of the Red Cross Donations Committee, of which Miss Dorothy Forbes is joint chairman, with James Jackson.

Another energetic worker who is doing much to further the interest of this cause is Miss Evelyn Sears, who has a long Red Cross record as an enthusiastic helper in the cause. Still other prominent members of this busy committee are Mrs. James Newell, Miss Lavinia H. Newell, Miss H. P. Sherman, Mrs. C. C. Ely, Mrs. J. Converse Gray, Mrs. H. R. Scott, Mrs. Harcourt Amory, Mrs. Edward Holmes, Miss Louisa Hunnewell, Mrs. Rayard Thayer, Miss Margaret Curtis, Mrs. Devereaux Barker, Mrs. Paul Courtenay, Mrs. Francis S. Gray, Mrs. James Jackson, Jr., Mrs. Henry P. King, Miss Margaret Winslow and Mrs. Edgar Wrightington.

MISS BETTY SOULE

Society or studies—or both—are claiming their attention now, but for the two weeks following Christmas quite a few of the younger set sought the ice and snow of northern New England for a fortnight of Winter sports. Included in this group was Miss Betty Soule, the daughter of Mrs. Horace Soule of Brookline.

Random Notes of Society Folk in Town and County

MRS. CHARLES F. CHOATE, who is sojourning at Palm Beach for the season, recently had as her luncheon guest Mrs. Leland Storey. Mr. Choate will join Mrs. Choate at their villa, "The Spray," the latter part of this month, and Mr. and Mrs. Choate, Jr., are expected down for part of the season.

Edward Bell has concluded his visit in Newport, R. I., with Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Norman and has returned to Cambridge.

Invitations have been issued for a reception at the White House on Thursday evening, January 12. This is the annual reception in honor of the diplomatic corps and will be the first of the four regular state receptions of the season.

Mrs. Franklin W. Hobbs of Beacon street, who is prominently allied with the Massachusetts League of Women Voters, is in charge of the luncheon arrangements at the regional conference which is to be held at the Twentieth Century Club on Janury 25 and 26. Mrs. George Richmond Fearing, Jr., as leader of the league, will extend the hospitalities, while Miss Florence Luscomb is chairman of the committee for these arrangements, and everything possible will be done to make the visitors enjoy the various sessions.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Saltonstall (Mary Rogers) are for the Winter at No. 2 Deerfield street, the former home of Mr. Saltonstall's late grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter C. Brooks.

SETTLEMENT IN 'MYSTERY SUIT' REPORTED

Worcester, Jan. 6.—Reports are current here that the $50,000 "mystery suit" brought by Clarence L. Bicknell, of Allston, against John E. Washburn, president of the Washburn-Garfield Company, and prominent Worcester clubman, has been settled out of court.

The action, one of tort, has remained shrouded in mystery since it was filed November last.

Mrs. Bicknell, who has been visiting here, said: "I have been warned not to talk about it. My husband is not living with me."

Attorney Joseph L. Burns of Boston, counsel for Bicknell, declined to answer any questions relative to the suit. So did Attorney Frank C. Smith, counsel for Washburn. He would say, however, that so far as he knew, it had not been settled.

When the attachment was recorded Attorney Burns maintained silence stating that his declarations would be filed in Superior Court the first Monday in January. They have not been filed.

PROVIDENCE POLICE REJECT PENSION PLAN

Providence, Jan. 6.—Three hundred members of the police department have voted unanimously to reject the proposed plan of a city council committee for the unification of pensions for city employes. The Providence Police Association voted in favor of excluding the police entirely from the proposed revision of the pension system and went on record as opposed to the placing of newly-recruited policemen under any plan which provides for any different assignments of payments than now apply to policemen. The association has a pension fund of its own which is subscribed to by members.

BLOCK 'REVOLT' AT WELLESLEY COLLEGE

Senate, Target of Recent Criticism, Given Support of Student Body

The undercurrent of "revolt" at Wellesley College that threatened last Fall to disrupt the entire student government organization, was officially declared dead when the girls held a huge mass meeting and by an overwhelming majority voted not to accept the resignations tendered by the members of the Student Senate.

Two months ago it was feared that serious trouble could not be checked. A number of students were made highly indignant when some ten or a dozen of their number, who had voluntarily confessed to violation of the rules, were either suspended or placed on probation.

Impromptu meetings were held then, and a clamor was made for a complete revision of the code of rules. The members of the senate became targets for more or less criticism for their part in the affair, and each offered her resignation.

With the mass meeting, however, came the first definite action on the part of the students as a whole, and it showed them lined up solidly behind the senators. The meeting voted to consider a plan calling for minor changes in the student government organization, but on the whole the meeting expressed approval of the action of the girls who compose the senate.

The senators who offered their resignations, and who have been instructed to remain in office, are Margaret Eyard of Hamilton, O., Emmavail Luce of New York city, Elizabeth Head of Bangor, Me., Irene Ott of Milwaukee, Wis., Josephine Atkinson of Hawley, A., and Sarah Carr of Chicago.

INDIAN TO PAY HIS DEBT TO WHITE BABIES

When Oskenonton, the Canadian Indian singer, steps out of the stage at Jordan Hall tomorrow night for the concert to be given in behalf of the Baby Hygiene Association, he will be paying part of the debt he considers he owes to all white babies. He was left motherless as a baby himself and brought up by foster parents, who cared for him and aided him develop his voice. A feature of the concert will be the primitive songs to the accompaniment of a native tom-tom, which he will sing from a stage set to represent a section of Canadian forest, and with Oskenonton's own wigwam in the centre. Another feature will be the use of a French horn as the sole accompaniment to the Indian's voice in several selections.

FREE BREAKFAST IS POPULAR AT TECHNOLOGY

Students Availing Themselves of Cocoa and Crackers Offer Each Morning

The undercurrent of discontent at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology have taken advantage of the opportunity of obtaining free cocoa and crackers each morning. Two hundred were served in the East Lounge of the main building on the first day of the free breakfasts.

As a result of the physical examinations conducted at Technology, Dr. Morse, head of the Medical Department, discovered that over 40 per cent. of the entire student body was undernourished. He explained that many of the students who commuted hurry off early in the morning to catch a train with only a small bite or no breakfast at all. To remedy the situation George Smith, in charge of the dining service at Walker Memorial offered to supply free cocoa and crackers to the undernourished.

Since the opening of the second semester a number of men from the Walker Memorial dining service are on hand each morning between 10 and 10:15 to serve free cocoa and crackers to those who had gone without breakfast. Mr. Smith thinks that more men will soon avail themselves of the opportunity of obtaining free food which is rich in "vitamines."

DE VALERA AND CABINET RESIGN

Arthur Griffith Will Probably Be Made New Irish Leader

split wide open, as wide as it possibly could be," said De Valera in a speech in Dail.

"I and those who are with me stand for a republic of Ireland. Nothing else will do."

He had endeavored to modify the Irish treaty, prior to adoption, to give Ireland a more independent status in relation to Great Britain though still entering the "Federation" of Commonwealth States comprising the empire.

Collins said that his resignation as Minister of Finance was not accepted. He issued a statement saying:

"I tendered my resignation, which was refused. The press item's action is only a red herring. We will have no Tammany here. If Dail rejects the treaty, De Valera can have a cabinet in ten minutes.

"The report of the peace committee was prevented from coming before the House by act on of three or four bullies."

Chairman McNeill of Dail Eireann ruled this afternoon that discussion of the Sinn Fein government ministry was out of order.

(Note: The full effect of Chairman MacNeill's ruling is not clear. Whether it was aimed at preventing De Valera's resignation, which had already been tendered, or whether it was designed to prevent De Valera from dissolving the ministry, is not made definitely plain.)

In the late afternoon session of Dail, De Valera withdrew his motion for suspension of the standing rules in view of the proximity of the vote upon the treaty.

De Valera, Born in America, Chosen by Unanimous Vote

Eamon De Valera was elected President of the Irish republic on October 26, 1917. Two other nominees, Arthur Griffith and Count Plunkett, declined to run, and De Valera was chosen unanimously.

President De Valera was born in New York city October 14, 1882. His father died when he was two and one-half years of age, and the young American then returned to his mother's people in County Limerick, Ireland. There he was reared.

He was educated at Bruree, Charleville, and the French College, Black Rock, County Dublin, in both the intermediate and university departments. Later he attended lectures at the National University, and at Trinity College, Dublin, distinguished as a student in his younger days.

At every stage of his college career, he won scholarships, prizes, degrees in arts, science and pedagogy.

COLLEGE LECTURER.

He taught the special honor courses in mathematical science, pure and applied, in the principal Dublin university colleges for men and women, to students of the late Royal University of Ireland at Blackrock-St. Stephens Green, Eccles street, Loreto, and later was lecturer in these courses at Maynooth College for ten years.

Little was heard in a public way of De Valera until 1917—when Dublin went out to greet the return of the hundreds of prisoners made by England after Easter week, 1916.

The freed Irishmen marched briskly up the wharf in military formation, led by a tall, soldierly young man with convict shaven head like the others—De Valera a stranger to most who looked on.

When a little later the crowd saw De Valera swung to the shoulders of the boys coming home and carried in triumph through the streets—Ireland had a new leader! Padraic Pearse was dead. But now De Valera—teacher, soldier and orator—the last man to surrender his arms in Easter week was still with them.

The impression of that first day only deepened with every day that passed and men learned how De Valera had borne the acid-test of prison life.

GAINS BIG FOLLOWING.

He now began a tour through Ireland, winning new personal adherents and converts to Sinn Fein at every point. The seat of East Clare fell vacant and De Valera, contesting that historic seat of Daniel O'Connell, won it by an immense majority.

So perfect a Gaelic scholar and speaker was he that at the Sinn Fein National Assembly in October, 1917, where with the desire of Arthur Griffith, he was unanimously elected president, De Valera actually took part in the debates, which were in Gaelic, by replying to each speaker—Ulsterman, Munsterman or Connaughtman—with the accent of his own cherished form of the language.

De Valera and Griffith announced their intention to use England's political machinery to express Ireland's will for freedom, and it was soon obvious to every observant person in Ireland that these men and their party would sweep their country at the general election.

At this time came the arrest of 80 men and women. They were held from May, 1918, to March, 1919. De Valera was among them. But an old gardener, singing in Gaelic under the prison walls, told De Valera how they could break the bars and De Valera's invincible personal courage accepted the risk.

Then one day the world was startled to hear that De Valera had made his escape from Lincoln jail, and a few weeks later to learn that the Irish leader was safely hidden in Ireland.

When the Dail Eireann held its first assemblage in the Mansion House, Dublin, on January 21, 1919, attended by all its members who were not in jail for exile, the session was conducted in Gaelic and an appeal made to all free nations in the world to recognize the Irish Republic.

Later in that year De Valera made a tour of the United States, placing Ireland's plea for freedom before many State Legislatures and assisting in the sale of the bonds of the Irish Republic. Boston was among the cities he visited.

DRUG PEDLARS TREATED TOO LENIENTLY

Assistant Appraiser Briry of Port of Boston Demands Heavier Penalties

An appeal to the Massachusetts Legislature to provide stricter penalties for "dope" pedlars, was made today by William A. Briry, assistant appraiser of the port of Boston, and former member of the State Board of Registration and pharmacy.

"The people who sell habit-forming drugs may be classed with the worst kind of criminals," declared Briry, "and the courts have been entirely too lenient with them. A minimum sentence of one year should be given for the first offence.

"That Governor Cox recognizes the narcotic drug traffic is assuming menacing proportions is evidenced by his message to the Legislature, to take immediate action on the matter.

"For forty years the people of Massachusetts have watched the opium peril grow. We have reason to fear the opium peril as much as a plague. Forty years ago it was the Chinaman who had the opium den, where smoking opium was the vice.

BOYS AND GIRLS MENACED.

"What have we now in Boston and other large cities today? Opium dens may be, but a thousand times worse—men and women in the morphine or cocaine traffic, soliciting customers on the streets among the boys and girls of Boston of just maturing age. Why? For the money there is in it.

"Should you, Mr. and Mrs. Massachusetts, want your son or daughter to become a drug addict and then become a thief, a pickpocket or a murderer?

"Would you want to see their manhood or womanhood broken and see them lower than the animals of the streets? No, of course you would not.

"But this is just what is going on in Boston and other large cities today. Just how long are you going to let someone else start this work? Just how many thousands of lives will you see sacrificed before you rise up and punish someone for inaction?

"The greatest curse of today we are watching increase by leaps and bounds. Many lives each year Massachusetts gives to the dope evil. Many girls and boys, who drop out of sight in Boston, go by the dope route.

"We are catching rats in Boston, examining the fleas on them for plague germs. We are treating every little pig in Massachusetts with serum so it will not have cholera.

75,000 ADDICTS IN STATE.

"What are you spending to protect your boys and girls from narcotic infection? Men and women, for the sake of $100 or $200 a night, are spreading deadly germs of disease on their hypodermic needles. The disease this needle spreads is far worse than that caught by swine or rats. Money for the animals of this country, but none for prevention of the drug evil.

"At the narcotic hearings at the State House it was brought out that the United States has the largest per capita consumption of narcotics. There are fully 75,000 drug addicts in Massachusetts alone.

"Does it mean anything when the police say, 'We arrest one gang and a new crowd takes its place, because the traffic is so profitable for the dope pedlar?

"One government agent said he saw morphine sold as freely as candy in one of our large cities, that Boston was one of the worst drug infested cities in the country.

"Should we concentrate our efforts and make a start in 1922, or wait forty more years, when the problem will be much harder to solve? The Boston American is to be commended for blazing the way for pointing out this terrible scourge to humanity. Something should be done now."

Fresh From Paris

Latest Word From Marie Suzanne

PARIS, France.

THE daytime mode continues to favor velvet for both frocks and wraps and over the velvet frock the Parisienne is very apt to wear a coatee of any one of a number of furs. A one-piece gown of midnight blue velvet, having a "V" neck-line and long slender sleeves, has its entire bodice and a line at the front of its skirt embroidered in blue and silver thread; long slender tassels depend from the skirt. For the coatee that accompanies this, black caracul is chosen, and combined with glossy black lynx in a model that blouses smartly at the waistline as the coat of one's cloth tailleur might do.

A WRAP that is every bit as slender and flattering in silhouette as a frock could be, is of stone-gray velvet beaded in steel; only the bodice is left plain, and finished with a string girdle. But the smartest note of all is an insert of kolinsky at the side of the skirt, which widens toward the hem, and this is matched by a collar that is buckled in dull silver.

THIS new store has been a wonderful success—business has developed far beyond my most optimistic estimates. In fact the Arthur Wallace Idea for men has "Gone Over" so big that it has startled the manufacturing and retailing shoe world. The betting was all against me. The "Wise ones" said—"Notwithstanding that I had made a huge success in women's shoes by taking the smallest profits to insure the biggest volume of sales—that the men would not respond to the Arthur Wallace Idea as the women did." But the men did, much more quickly and in greater numbers.

STONE BELIEVES EDITOR LEADS COMMUNITY

Newspaper Man's Post Most Important, He Tells Fall River Chamber

Fall River, Jan. 6.—Melville E. Stone, former manager of the Associated Press, believes the editor of a daily newspaper holds the most important post in a civilized community, and can, if he wishes, do more good than a clergyman, doctor or lawyer.

That opinion was expressed in an address made at a dinner given by the Fall River Chamber of Commerce at the Mellon Hotel, as the first of a series of get-together dinners to men of different industries.

Newspaper men from New Bedford, Providence, Lawrence, Attleboro, North Attleboro, Boston, Pawtucket and Newport were among the guests.

Dr. Talcott Williams, dean of the Columbia University School of Journalism, and Mr. Stone were the two guests of honor. Dr. Williams declared the newspaper was the one great agency that made life in a large city possible, for only through the press could residents in a large community learn what their fellow citizens were doing.

Dean Williams also stressed the difficulty newspapers encounter in getting the best news. He also pointed out big improvement in the class, character and methods of advertising.

A large steel safe, heavy and bulky but very, very empty, was carried away by robbers who entered the McKay and Huntley garage on Summer street, Hingham.

The thieves had entered through a side entrance and carried the safe out through the front door. No trace of it can be found.

LOWELL POLICE CHIEF OUT, TO GET HEARING

Welch Is Accused by Mayor Brown of Failure to Enforce Liquor Law

Lowell, Jan. 6.—Superintendent of Police Redmond Welch today surrendered his office to Winfred C. McGrayne, pending the hearing on January 26 of charges of failure to enforce the liquor law, which Mayor Brown brought recently against Welch.

City Solicitor Tierney gave it as his opinion that Welch should retain until he had been given the hearing by the City Council for which he asked and Welch at once complied.

"There will be no great changes made at present in the department," said McGrayne, on taking charge. "Great efforts will be made, however, to stop the sale of liquor in Lowell.

"It is almost impossible to stop the sale of intoxicating liquor in the near-beer saloons and there are fifty of them in Lowell. About the only way to proceed against them is on the charge that they become nuisances.

WILSON MAKES BIG RAID AT WEBSTER

Find Still of Great Capacity Which Was Operated by Electricity

Webster, Jan. 6.—A party of Prohibition Enforcement Officer Wilson's men, deputy sheriffs and Webster and Dudley policemen united in making the biggest roundup of alleged bootleggers and moonshiners the district has experienced.

Seven persons were charged with illegal sale, one man was summoned to appear in the Federal Court on a charge of violating the Volstead act and another was charged with interfering with officers while in performance of their duty.

An elaborate still, operated by electricity and capable of turning out forty gallons of moonshine, was seized in Dudley, together with five barrels of hot mash, three and a half gallons of moonshine, 100 pounds of sugar and an oil stove.

Officers had been in the district for the past week obtaining evidence.

"Forget Me," Wrote Watertown Wife Who Vanished

'JERRY' WATSON REFUSES TO BE FUNNY

Western Reporters Try in Vain to Get Councillor to Show Humorous Goods

By CHARLES O. POWER.

Cleveland, O., Jan. 6—Mayor Thomas as of Columbus received the Boston Lighting Committee in style and extended a real greeting with a reception committee of officials and prominent citizens. He gave them to understand that all public and business organizations will do everything in their power to throw light on the important municipal problem the Boston officials are studying.

Colonel Thomas F. Sullivan, Public Works Commissioner of Boston, was met by an old personal friend, Colonel M. J. Duffy, Director of Public Service in Columbus. He has charge of the lighting plant and will act as teacher of the visitors.

The reputation of President Watson of the Boston City Council as a wit has preceded him. It must be said that some of the interviewers who have sought him for "funny stuff" stories for their papers have been disappointed. Mr. Watson is taking his mission very serious and surely is armed with his general dignity.

At Buffalo a persistent specialist in the art of interviewing said he just loved to have a little offhand pun or two by him from the Boston humorist at Nothing doing. Watson refused to admit that as an expert on the proposed trip.

At Cleveland a special writer desired something cute from Mr. Watson. One of the visitors of his paper had heard of "Jerry" upon several occasions when the editor was holding down a desk job on a New England sheet and he had said to the scribe who knew Watson and let him talk soon good copy.

"I like that," remarked Mr. Watson. "Well just tell him he is all wrong. I am not funny, or do I aim to be when I am away from home. Our committee is performing a most important duty and every member of it is serious about it."

Every big news man and every clever headliner has faith and confidence in Cleveland. There is not much room left in the mind of a single newspaperman of the city's development until it intrudes every place but New York and Cleveland.

Even I myself have to state some things about Cleveland to a big extent when I am writing along, for I must tell you I love and

WOULDN'T WEAR PAJAMAS ON THE STAGE

Playing Her First Big Part in "Happy-Go-Lucky"

Audrey Hart Aspires to Play "Camille," but With Novel Setting

By FRED J. McISAAC, Dramatic Editor.

One of the nicest things about "Happy-Go-Lucky" is Audrey Hart. In my experience in introducing into a reader's dressing room I never met a sweeter and less sophisticated girl than the girl who plays Tess of Bloomsbury, in Al Woods comedy at the Selwyn.

Miss Hart is either those things or she is a far better actress than anybody on the boards. Answer I to suit for her.

"Oh," said the dear little thing, "are you going to interview me? Nobody ever, ever interviewed me before. I don't know what to do! What must I say?"

LOOKS SCARED.

Talk about your startled fawns. A dress locked on when I left her opening her first, trading a loaded line and telling her to run and get cards. However, you can't keep a leading lady like that if she's not a jesting lady at all times. I have to be more than a friend.

"Well, I have prepared three questions for you to answer. I marked great X's. There are all written down. I'm thinking of a telegram blank out of his pocket."

Miss Hart looked frightened a dea. She folded her hands and unto it then.

Question No. 1. Where do you come from?

"I'm in Chicago."

"Why did you get the job?"

"I'm pretty excitement."

FIRST BIG PART.

How long have you been an actress?"

"This is my first big part. I did some stock work in Toronto."

"How did you get the job?"

"Why, I just asked for it. Look here, I don't believe you have any questions there at all. You're not a bit of use to me. Are you going to quit?"

It is open to question but I do the best I can. What are your ambitions?

"Well said Miss Hart. "I want to be a successful actress. I am doing my part now in the 'Happy-Go-Lucky' and I'm trying to make it a success."

"Looking the way you do at Audrey Hart for Al Woods you are sure not to be a pajama actress in one of his farces."

WON'T WEAR PAJAMAS

"No, I won't," declared Miss Hart in quick indignation. "I was asked for Mr. Woods if he knew me as a play such parts. I wouldn't wear pajamas to get them a bed on a Sunday. Any thing—but there."

Jack Lait gave Miss Hart a part in Have Town and Gown and Washington and they have played with Lenore Ulric.

"I have to admit they're nice, but I do not want to be known as playing anything that I played from. I'm going to play Camille."

"There's a bed in that too, you know," said Miss Hart.

AMATEUR RING STARS BATTLE FOR SHOW IN TITLE BOUTS

By JACK CONWAY.

The five youths who batter their way to victory at the St. Joseph's A. A. amateur boxing tournament at Commercial Hall Brighton, square, tonight, will journey to New York to take part in the championship plex stays at Madison Square Garden. The prospects of a trip to Big Broadway has resulted in the largest entry list in the history of Billy Caddy's organization.

Plenty of rugged fighting and fast clever boxing featured the p... As the rivals are well matched the battle for the premier honors is sure to be hot.

The tournament will be conducted under the new amateur weight rules. The classes follow: 112 pounds, 118 pounds, 126 pound novice, 135 pound and 147-pound.

Reservations may be secured at Room ... No. 2 School street.

The ten round bout between Pat McCarthy and Billy Slade which will be staged under the direction of the Young Men's Athletic Association Monday night, has aroused all kinds of interest among the fans who like to see the big fellows in action. It is the most important heavyweight conflict that has been booked by a Boston club in years. There is something about heavy weight matches that attract persons to the ringside who only occasionally display interest in things pugilistic.

Slade's first battle as a big league fighter will be in Australia. When he first went to the Antipodes from Canada he was a comparative unknown. He began taking up weight work in Australia and in a few months he was a big favorite with the Australian fans. He also made the acquaintance of Les Darcy, the idol of the Australian fight fans. In an effort to duplicate Darcy's success Slade went to Sydney, where he was matched with Jim Sullivan, but received the decision.

The Californian is considered one of the best boxers in the heavyweight division. He also has a stiff punch.

It cannot be said that Slade is picking on a setup. McCarthy is one of the best of our mobile heavyweights. He recently punched his way to a victory over Captain Bob Roper, at Providence, which is a feat of which any boxer might well be proud. At Lynn on New Year's Day McCarthy continued his victory habits by running over Chonyski

Ted Lewis Matched for Bout With Carpentier

London, Jan. 8.—Ted "Kid" Lewis, English welter and middleweight champion, has today been matched with Georges Carpentier for a fight in March for 100 pounds a side and a purse.

Lewis, who once won the world's welterweight from Jack Britton only to lose it back in the American fighter, recently captured two British championships since starting his campaign here some months ago. He has grown heavier, too, and is considered a good match for Carpentier by English critics.

SOCCER FANS GO TO PAWTUCKET TOMORROW

To See Abbott Worsted and Fairlawn Rovers in National Cup Match

By Art Curly

Soccer fans will flock to Pawtucket ... to see the result of the National Cup tie, fourth round, between the Abbott Worsteds of Forge Village and the Fairlawn Rovers of Pawtucket.

Those two teams clashed two weeks ago at Forge Village. The game ended in a draw, one goal each, and if it can be taken as a standard, New England soccer enthusiasts are due to see one of the greatest exhibitions they ever witnessed Saturday.

Last year the best game of the season was played on the Fairlawn grounds between the Rovers and Todd's Shipyard in a National championship contest. The former finally lost out in the last few minutes after putting up a game battle against the more experienced team.

All attendance records for the season were broken at this match ... crowd is of course behind the ... and the Rovers' line of fence, some ... watched the struggle from houses that overlooked the field. All indications point to another record crowd.

The Rovers have a faster eleven this season, and are the favorites to win on the brown grounds tomorrow. There are seven players of the star team of last season in tomorrow's line ... Conn, Rowley, Camp ... Marshall, Harrison, Smith and Weir.

The new men, Kosekie, Tattersall, Reilley and Schlueter, are a great help to the team, especially the last named player, whose great work in goal was greatly responsible for keeping the Worsted forwards from getting the winning goal two weeks ago.

The same officials will be in charge of the game, although it is hoped that both teams will have neutral linesmen in accordance with the rules, and thereby avoid a repetition of the argument that arose two weeks ago.

Says It's Cheaper to Accompany Your Girl to the Altar Than It Is to Follow Her Lawyer to the Bank.

When you want to marry a girl you ask her. When you want to get out of it you ask her lawyer.

Love is blind, but the cashier is an oculist.

She feels so bad that she cries and her tears wash your account right out of the bank.

Her love started in her heart and broke out in your wallet.

She's so embarrassed that she's ashamed to show her face in public. With your fifty thousand dollars she can stay home.

Your were going to marry her because she had a wonderful family tree, but her family tree turned out to be a Weeping Willow.

Her tears can be checked but the check has to be certified.

She's so broken hearted over your turning her down that she won't marry again that year.

A man spends the first two or three years of his life learning how to speak. He spends the rest of his life learning how to shut up.

There's an old saying, "He who hesitates is lost," but it's wrong. He who hesitates remains single.

Heart balm is the only liniment which doesn't come in bottles.

The label says, "Shake the bottle," but it's not so easy to shake the girl.

Just because her father gave her an airplane, don't think that you can give her the air.

Always remember, it's cheaper to accompany your girl to the altar than it is to follow her lawyer to the bank.

Nick Flatley Says

SEE where the league presidents have to go to French Lick to get out the schedules. French Lick is the home of a sulphur springs, where most of the boys go to get the remnants of what they gargle out of their systems. Pretty soft for the magnates. If the rest of us could do that we'd all be there, when we tried to figure out the license plates.

Have all the bills sent there the first of the month, but don't put in the recipe book. That's where stuff would be no good for the bootleggers to ... them a touch of what they'll get a lot of loose ... public good to ... bother ... lost the coin we'd ... dug up they keep on ... us.

Getting out a baseball schedule is simply rewriting the calendar. Same day Boston plays at New York this year, New York plays at Boston next year. New York will win anyway, if it's the American League.

THE guys that wrote the first schedules did all the work. Only things they have to change now are the dates of the world's series. Won't have to change the place any while the New Yorkers have the money. Other magnates get it from them, but they still have plenty. Only way the other magnates will ever be able to get any, if they don't watch out.

If the boys keep on making the leagues lop sided, they can pay all their games by telephone. Wouldn't have expenses of Spring trips then. Frinetance, Cap Huston would call operator.

"Get me Boston," he would tell operator.

"You got it already," operator would reply, if baseball fan. But you gather the idea.

THERE was a man in our town
Who knew a thing or two.
He got his stuff from Canada
And never touched home brew.

JOE DUGAN has been trying to get away from the Athletics for a season or more. Joe absorbed that happy line just as soon as he discovered that he was good enough to make the big league grade. He has been angling for a place with some contending club, but it looks now as if he would wind up in Boston.

Should Joseph come here, he would be a distinct acquisition provided he played all the baseball he knows. He's a bird of a fielder, and swings a very mean bat in the pinches. But he's a temperamental youth, who doesn't like the atmosphere of the chronic tailender. For which you cannot blame him.

As the Red Sox line up now, the change of uniform will not change said atmosphere much, or any. Young Mister Dugan on a fighting ball club would be a whale of an attraction. All Boston needs to make Joe a real star is a team with enough ability sprinkled around to put up some sort of a fight.

SAM CARRICK declares that the turf in America, where the Tigers will train, is the best in the South for Spring training ball players on. So all Ty Cobb needs is the ball players.

STEVE CUNNINGHAM takes enough time off from legal matters to inform us that the signs point to the greatest golf season on record. Steve is running the Flag Tavern Club, that public-private affair out in Weston. Membership is practically nothing, and a nominal green fee is charged for playing.

He has enrolled fifty new members in the past month and will start the season with a list of 200, which is quite a flock for a new course. He has nine holes finished out there, and nine more ready to start on in the Spring.

Just now Mister Cunningham is engaged in the courts, trying to have a pond that backs up on his fairways let loose. It has been drained up, and used for ice cutting purposes, and makes the going soggy in moist weather.

That'll be the way with the real out for the chap who can't spend too much money at his golf, or hurdle the waiting lists at most of our clubs.

WEISMULLER SETS UP NEW SWIMMING MARK

Three of the six veterans played on the Amherst football team last Fall, including Captain Worcester, '21, of Cambridge; Davidson, '22, of Auburndale, who captained the football team, and Plimpton, '22, of New York. HALLOWELL OPPOSES ALL PRIVILEGES ON YALE FOOTBALL TICKETS

Frank W. Hallowell, one of Harvard's best athletes of the '90s, suggests that the Harvard Athletic Association do away entirely with privileged classes in the distribution of football tickets for the Yale game.

There has been discussion about the way tickets were given out for the Yale game last year. Hallowell in the first athlete to enter the conflict. He thinks two good seats should be enough for former football players.

He would get out entirely all the other privileged classes.

Hallowell was end on the 1890 football team which was the first to defeat Yale on the Yale field, and was ... when it won a series from the Blue in 1898.

"Much has been said by men who have been receiving four football seats. Is it too late to hear from an old player who has been receiving four good seats for every Yale game for the past twenty-eight years?

"There are too many privileged classes among the graduates. The game should be first and foremost for the undergraduates, and the undergraduates should be the only privileged class.

"Reduce the football squad and coaches to five seats each, and allow ... reasonable number over and ... the freshmen ... in two ... in some poorer section, say opposite the goal posts, so that he can take his father, or mother, or brother, or sister, or best girl if he wishes.

"Cut out the privilege of the old player. I have claimed now for a number of years that it was not fair for me to receive ... good seats, when many of my friends, enthusiastic football followers, were getting two poor seats, but curiously enough, I have never found a graduate who ... the privilege ... two seats.

"If the ... to the old player should have the privilege at least reduce it from four to two seats until the application of every other ... has been filled, then allow him two more from the poor seats that are left, if there are any ...

"Cut out entirely all the other privileged classes. There is no reason why a hockey club man who played on the crew, or played on the baseball team, or ran on the track team should be privileged to get good football seats.

"Also, there is no reason why a Harvard professor who may or may not have any special interest in the game, should come ahead of some graduate who has followed it with keen interest for years.

"The graduate privileged classes have grown so large that at present the ordinary graduate has no possibility ... to get a good seat. Cut out the privileged classes and let every graduate ... on an even chance, after the undergrad ... are taken care of, and there will be no more kicking."

Hudsons Win Again

The Hudson town team defeated the Company F five of Marlboro, 63 to 24. This makes it three straight for the Hudson boys.

Boxing for Harvard's Intercollegiate Sport List

Recognition of boxing as an intercollegiate sport is expected to be taken at a meeting of the Harvard Athletic Committee Tuesday. There is little doubt that official sanction will be forthcoming, despite the fact that for two successive years the college athletic authorities voted against such a proposition.

The Athletic Committee has ... reviewed the proposal recently but delayed judgment, and a petition of 200 students, including virtually every athlete in college, is expected to swing the committee's vote to a favorable decision.

WRECKING OF RED SOX MAKES FANS DESERT

Boston's baseball fans are up in arms over the wholesale selling out of the Red Sox and the Boston American League club star players to the Yankees, Cleveland and other clubs. They are so wrathy over the two last deals engineered by Owner Frazee, by which the Red Sox gave away Everett Scott, Joe Bush, Sam Jones and Stuffy McInnis to New York and Cleveland for Peckinpaugh, Elmer Miller, some has-beens and two disciplined players, wrecking the once proud Red Sox, that they vow they can no longer support the team operating at Fenway Park.

T. J. McCluskey of Brookline hits the nail on the head when he says that the Red Sox traded stars for dead wood. He declares he is interested in a Red Sox team or will not attend a game. His letter, follows:

Sporting Editor:

Dear Sir—I am one of the regulars at Fenway Park—as far back as 1902 in the days of Jimmy Collins' team at the old Huntington avenue grounds. My opinion in regards to saving the Red Sox team. One and only way is to railroad Frazee out of baseball. In regards to the trade recently made it was stars traded for dead wood. The only player worth considering is R. Peckinpaugh.

T. J. McCLUSKEY.

Brookline.

P. S.—One serious mistake Frazee made was to give away Everett Scott. I am through with baseball while Frazee is the owner.

* * *

The letter is a very good index of the resentment felt by the fans over the hopelessness. But they hate to desert the American League team, for it was Dan Johnson a league that returned the old 25-cent game. Of course that's all forgotten now.

But J. K., Dorchester, shows that the fans will make Frazee regret his ill-advised action in selling the stars. His letter follows:

* * *

Sporting Editor, Boston American:

Dear Sir—The criticism in the American I think might do some good, as you say, if the people co-operate.

Every man you meet says he is through with the Red Sox if they don't banish that owner of theirs. It is true he has made a lot of mistakes by letting those stars go, but he has got more than he says for them.

I should think President Frazee would get on to himself, and not make a wreck out of Boston as a baseball city. There will be a lot of people who will travel out to Braves Field instead of Fenway Park. It won't seem natural not to go out to Fenway Park and see the Red Sox play. I do not think it is hopeless yet if something is started. Hoping you will do something, I remain,

J. K.

Dorchester.

Middlesex Cannot Work

It looks as if Middlesex School hockey team must play its first game tomorrow, with little practice as the thaw made it impossible to get in any work on the ice. Middlesex is booked to play Country Day.

How Can Red Sox Be Saved for Boston?

Boston fans have their own ideas about the Red Sox. Some think Owner Frazee has completely wrecked the team. Others believe there is still hope of rebuilding a ball club from the ruins.

The American League situation is a big thing in sports here just now. A consensus of fan opinion would do more to iron out the troubles than anything else. Harsh, but restricted criticism hasn't helped much. A real slow-down of sentiment might.

Write your ideas on the matter in to the sporting editor. If you think the recent trades helped, say so; if you think otherwise, say so. Address letters to Sporting Editor, Boston American, No. 80 Summer street. All letters will be published.

GAMES OUT FOR BASKETBALL POSITION

Amherst Also Has Eight Who Were in the Varsity Contests Last Year Out for the Team

Amherst, Jan. 6.—Eight men who played in varsity contests last year are among the candidates who are working out with Amherst's basketball squad. In addition "Ted" Eames, '24, who was a regular two years ago, will be on hand to hold the centre or one of the forward positions.

Last year Amherst's basketball season was not very successful but Coach Widmayer feels certain that with a wealth of material to draw from this year, results will be different. Out of fifty men who reported, the squad has been cut to thirty-three men, and another slash is coming. No captain has been elected, but a meeting of the first string men will be held soon to pick a leader. The first game will be played with Trinity at Amherst on January 18.

John Kilonis, the Greek middleweight wrestling star, has been signed by Promoter Toohey to wrestle in the semi-final of an all-star tourney in Mechanics Building, January 17. Kilonis is on his way back after an eight months' jaunt to the Pacific Coast.

There is a strong likelihood that Jim Londos and Ronald Gardner will settle on a location for their battle tonight. Representatives of both men, as well as representatives of promoters from various cities, will meet in New York today to decide the matter. Because the falls only will count and because the match will be without time limit and to an absolute finish, it appears as though Boston has even a better chance than Kansas City to get the event.

"PENROD" MAKES MONEY FOR CONCORD BASEBALL

Bob-Master Earle W. Peckham, business manager for the Concord High School play, "Penrod," produced by and for the high school athletic association, announced that the net profits of the play were $526.21, exceeding by $132.58 any amount ever made before on any high school production. This will finance the baseball team.

ALL-NEW ENGLAND TEAM MEETS DILBOY POST

The manager of the Dilboy Post basketball team has made arrangements to handle the largest crowd that ever packed K. of C. Hall, Somerville tonight, when the All New England Basketball Club will serve as the main attraction in the opening game of the post's home season.

The fact that "Miss Somerville for 1922" will be picked by Captain Sherman of the New England team and Captain Turner of the Dilboy post, with a possibility that Mayor Webster will act as third judge, has all the fair sex of this city anxious to look their prettiest.

Basketball fans from near and far will take in the contest to get a glimpse of Irving Bidman, holder of two world's records. This wary athlete is the best player of all who have invaded these parts. His performance a fortnight ago at Lynn amazed the Shoe City fans.

The Sharon A. C. will tackle the fast Maynard professionals at Maynard Saturday. Sharon with a row of victories, including two wins over Newburyport is a favorite. Manager Murray of Maynard has signed two stars for the rest of the season, who will start against Sharon.

The Charlestown A. C. is putting a fast team on the floor this season. Paul Allen, Jack Murphy of the old Company B team, Eddie Reed and "Hickey" Cadigan, Joe Barnett of Norton, all well known to the followers of the net game, make up a quintette able to hold its own with the best. Games are wanted with a team close in or around Boston. The manager's address is H. W. Mooney, 27 Bunker Hill street, Charlestown. Phone 1584-W.

The Boston Y. M. C. A. basketball teams are now playing in mid-season form. The varsity team, playing as the 1920 club team and later as the varsity, has won seven straight games, all the new 1920 quintet has won all three of the games played since being formed.

C. Chiu, the Chinese star of the new 1920 team, has been showing fine form, and has scored more than half of the team's points to date.

A test of the team's offensive and defensive work will be had in the contest with Brockton Y. M. C. A. at the Boston Y. on Saturday. This will be a league game. The Brockton team has been playing a fast game, so an interesting, hard fought contest is looked for. The 1920 team will meet the Brockton "Y" young men's team in the second game.

BOSTON K. OF C. TEAM PLAYS BOSTON COLLEGE

Owing to a break in their schedule, which would necessitate an extended rest of about a week, the Boston Council, K. of C., basketball team will take on the Boston College five at the Girls' High School Saturday night.

The Boston team won the State championship in the K. of C. League last season. They have yet to lose their first game this season and have met some of the fastest teams in this vicinity.

Jimmy Cassell, a former Boston College High School star athlete, is playing on the Knights' team. He has been one of the big point gatherers for the Caseys, and he will be closely watched by the college players. He is of more than ordinary ability.

THE BRIDE'S PLAY

A Stirring and Gorgeous Photoplay, Based on Donn Byrne's Famous Story

Read the Serial Here and Watch for the Motion Picture Soon at Leading Theatres

Synopsis

Aileen Barrett, a lovely young girl, daughter of John Barrett, lives in a small Irish village and has been brought up in a simple way, in accord with her father's scanty means, but has greatly endeared herself to the people of the countryside by her kindness and charm. Her father has long been planning great things for her; he has discovered valuable quarries of building stone on his land and becomes rich, but is stricken with death. Aileen returns from her studies at a convent and meets Bulmer Meade, whose love poems she greatly admires. He tells her he loves her. She loves him, but hesitates to say so. Sir Fergus Cassidy plans a grand ball.

("The Bride's Play," from a story by Donn Byrne, has been created into a motion picture by Cosmopolitan Productions, direction of George W. Terwilliger, scenario by Mildred Considine. It will be released as a Paramount Picture).

WITH an intuition not to be denied she had likewise mistrusted the post from the start. "He's here for no good," she decided Sir Fergus, and was surprised that the other had no comment to make. His visits had been few since the arrival of Meade, and when he came it was only to pass the time of day.

"To'll be looking for Miss Aileen," she said. "She's off gallivanting with that worthless poet fellow—there they come now—."

"I can't wait," said Sir Fergus. "Give her my best wishes."

But Meade did not come to the house. Bridget could see him bowing over the girl's hand as they paused down the road. Also she could read in the eyes of Aileen when she came in that her heart was not for Sir Fergus.

The girl sat down to play her harp—and the old airs with their sweet strains smote the older woman's heart; she knew that the little girl she had brought up was in love at last; tears came to her eyes.

"You're not crying," said Aileen, rushing over to console the only mother she had ever known.

"Crying?" said the indignant Bridget, "not at all. I've got something in my eye, that's all—why would I be crying when you're playing so fine?"

"Father was right to send me to school," she said irrelevantly. "Just think of all the things I wouldn't have known if I'd stayed here"——

"Anyone would think you were planning to leave us," said the wary Bridget.

"Anyone would be wrong," answered the girl lightly, but the thought lingered with her. It had never occurred to her that when the time came for her knight to carry her away that she would be deserting Newry, perhaps to return seldom.

She lay awake that night thinking about it; she wondered what life would be like in the city away from the song of the sea and the message of the meadows; away from all the people who knew her and the little ones she loved. It was unthinkable, and she consoled herself that perhaps even a poet would find Newry too beautiful to leave.

There was no doubt in her heart now that she loved Meade, and she longed to believe that he loved her; an adept in breaking down the reserve and shy and sensitive girls, the poet continued his declarations of undying affection.

Meade Wins a Treasure

Constant companionship, the softening influence of the lovely weather; the man's eagerness, all combined to make Aileen a victim. Stopping near her gate in the moonlight he poured forth anew his devotion.

Pleading was in his voice and love in his eyes: "My little Aileen, tell me you do care, won't you

"Yes, I do care," the words were scarcely audible; in a second his arms were about her and his lips crushed to hers.

In such fashion as old as the hills Aileen plighted her troth to her knight; for a moment they stood, the girl filled with the sweet exultation that comes with the giving up of the heart; then she picked a long-stemmed rose, gave it to him, and waved her hand as she fled to the house.

"The early bird catches the worm," replied Meade, laughing and swinging the rose up and down

"You're going"' queried Meade.

"I don't know

"Oh, you don't! Well, I leave you to your rustic enjoyment then, but Adrienne will miss you—didn't you write a sonnet to her once and hasn't she been grateful ever since?"

THE DECIDING STROKE

AN UNTANGLEMENT UNRAVELED

By Cora Remington

"I don't know what to do," it ran. I can only take a week's Winter vacation this year and am longing to see both you and Phillip, but how in the heart it makes it impossible for me to divide my short time between you, as the week I must in my being on the train about five days out of the entire week."

Petulantly, she went over to the quaint little old fashioned writing desk and docked off a few lines that were intended to show him quite plainly where his duty lay.

Meaning Miss Ridley, the man in question, sat in his club peacefully smoking a good cigar when he raised over his predicament with Tom Carruthers, the friend who always understood.

With Two Girls

"Yes, sir," Riley declared, "it is a fact, a man can be in love with two girls at the same time."

"Lucky thing for you, old man. Keep them in blissful ignorance. By the way, with which one are you going to spend your vacation?"

"I can't decide what to do. I've written to both the girls telling them how much I'd love to be with them, but somehow I feel as if I ought to spend it instead with my mother, who is far from well and is really counting the hours until she can have me with her."

And then the next morning he received the letter from Constance. It was rather an unkind, vicious little epistle, but liking her a lot better, not realizing that, and only thinking that he had offended the sweetest, dearest girl in the world.

It was an infernal predicament, whatever he did he would wish that he had done the other thing—and there was still Elise Biddle, the second girl, to hear from. With some impatience he waited for a letter from the third corner of his feminine triangle, and when at last it did arrive he almost dreaded to open it, for it was sure to show another facet to his already many-sided trouble. "Dear, dear, James," it began.

"I know exactly how you feel about your vacation, and as much as I would love to see you it seems to me your duty is to go to your mother. You are her only son, and she is not well and of course she longs to have you with her. Until a man is engaged I think his first duty is to his parents, and although I shall be very disappointed at not seeing you I have the greater respect for you for putting your mother first. Please give her my love—I remember her as a very fine woman the few days we were together at the beach last year."

Sitting back down at his desk he sprawled a few characteristic lines to his mother and enclosed Elise's letter. "So I'll be there next week, mother," he ended "about Thursday."

Then to his surprise a few days later he received a note from Mrs. Riley saying that she was rushing to finish house-cleaning and papering, and asking him to postpone his visit if possible.

The time at last arrived and after a long and tiresome journey it was with some little trepidation that James watched the familiar scenes of the homeward stretch.

As the train pulled into the little station he looked eagerly everywhere for the first glimpse of his mother, and was surprised to see her at last standing beside a slender girl whose bright, happy face was expectantly scanning the incoming train.

In His Arms

"I'll be exclaimed under his breath. "Impossible! How"——

By this time the little old lady was in his arms and all speculation came to an end.

"Jamesy, I played an awful trick on Elise." Mrs. Riley laughed "I didn't tell her you'd postponed your visit and merely wrote her begging her to come and cheer up a lonely old woman. Her letter was so dear I simply couldn't cheat such a sweet, unselfish child out of her happiness so I decided we'd share you together."

"Just like you, mother, you old dear"

"Yes, and when I found out I came near running away," the girl put in with a little embarrassment.

"But you know you're going to marry me some day and you didn't really want to go, did you, Elise?" he asked, looking straight into the frank blue eyes that fell before his earnest gaze.

"And I'm the happiest woman," said the mother

SHE IS "FULL OF PEP" THEY SAY

She is Good-Looking and Gay and is Always Ready for a Good Time

Why is a girl popular? Look around and see what a good time the good-looking ones have all the time. Men seek them out and ask them to parties, dances and entertainments. And notice that it is not the dull-face type real men like most, but the red blooded girl with "pep" and happy good nature. Any girl who is tired and languid and has a poor complexion and dull eyes can improve her condition and be far happier if she will simply take Gude's Pepto-Mangan until she has put her blood into good condition. Red blood means "full of life" and "full of life" usually means happiness.

Try Gude's Pepto-Mangan and see how much better you feel. Doctors have used it nearly thirty years for weak, run-down people. It helps them get well. Sold in both liquid and tablet form.—Advertisement.

Some Yarn Spinner.

"Have you heard Spinem's latest fishing yarn?"

"No, I haven't," said Mr. Glumm, "and I don't want to hear it."

"Why not?"

"Because Spinem hasn't even speaking acquaintance with the truth. He couldn't describe a smallpox epidemic without making you think it was something you'd hate to miss!"

A False Start

"Them last rounds don't count!" he announced hoarsely. "The fight will have to start all over again!"

"What's the trouble?" roared an individual in the tenth row

"The trouble is," explained the referee, "that the moving-picture man has struck a bad spot in his film, and the pictures are no good. Are you ready up there, professor? All right. Shake hands, boys! On my right we have——"

Rich Girl, Poor Girl—A Fine New Serial

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water

Copyright, 1921, Star Company

She remembered now that some "gentlemen" had asked that she sing it. She hated him for asking it

He was probably one of the same sort as Heyman. Restaurants had so many men patrons who ogled girls'

She began to sing, her voice quavering and tremulous. With a heavy effort she raised her eyes and faced the diners

His—at once she saw the girl she had seen on that first night over a fortnight ago—the Miss Hollingshead who, in Madame Orlova's shop, had said impulsively to the little milliner who waited on her

"I like you!"

And as one met this girl's smile courage entered into Adelaide Brown's heart

Her fear vanished, she straightened her slender figure and finished her song.

Then, with a bow of recognition of the applause she received, she hastened from the platform and from the dining room.

"Well, did you see the man?" he asked sharply

"What man"

"I—I—I forgot all about him," the girl stammered

"You're a Fool."

Then, remembering the warning which the triumph of the past few minutes had effaced from her mind, she added:

"I did not really look around the room at all—except at one lady I had seen before She seemed to be fond of my singing," she added with a little air of self-confidence.

"You can stamped his foot angrily "I told A lady" he scoffed, "you're a fool—that's what you are a fool

"You got a chance to attract a man who may come here again and again to see you and meet you—and you forget to do as I told you and look around for Mr

"Forget" nothing. That's a lie You did not forget. You're stubborn and a fool—that's all. You can go

She looked at him as if stunned for a moment. He had expected pleadings, for, from her manner and appearance, he was sure she needed work. Had he not been sure of this he might not have bullied and insulted her

To his surprise she turned and, without a word put on her hat, snatched up her coat and started for the door

Here she paused

"My money" she exclaimed.

"You can come for it tomorrow night," he told her.

"I want it now," she said. "I have not been paid for this week I am not coming back tomorrow night."

Then, feeling her voice deserting her and the tears rushing to her eyes, she fled from the room, passing on her way the dancer whose "turn" was to follow the orchestral piece now being played

Her eyes still blinded by tears Adelaide ran out into the street and right into the portly form of a man who, with his daughter, had just emerged from the main door of the restaurant

"I beg your pardon," he began Then, as he saw the startled face, he cried: "Why, bless my soul, Patsy! It's the little singer herself!"

With a gasp, Adelaide noted that the "Patsy" addressed was "that rich Miss Hollingshead"

"Please pardon me," Adelaide stammered. "I was just hurrying away to get back to—to—where I was singing"

Then, as Patricia had her hand kindly on the agitated girl's arm, the trembling voice failed

She dare not say more lest she burst into tears. She tried to smile into the face of the old rich man who stood gazing wonderingly at her.

"Come, Dad," the rich girl said abruptly. "Call the car and we will get away from this crowd"

That night Adelaide Brown was driven in a limousine to a little apartment on Fourth Street. But first the owner of the limousine instructed his chauffeur to make a round of the park

"I want to talk to you Miss Brown," he said bluntly "I guess this is as good a time as any Patty—my daughter—will tell you first of all what our idea is"

She felt dazed. Patricia's recognition of her, the rich girl's introduction of the elderly man as her father, his request that the singer let him take her home in his car—all had come so quickly and unexpectedly that she feared she would wake and find she had been dreaming in her own little bed at home

Avowal

"Well," Patricia was saying, "you noticed, I suppose, that my mother, who was with me, was blind. It makes it pretty hard for me—and for her."

"Yes," Adelaide said with swift sympathy. "I understand. My mother is blind, too."

"I know she is," Patricia replied. "You know about her—about her blindness"

Adelaide asked in astonishment

It did not take long to explain conditions Patricia talked fast and excitedly When she paused for breath Miss Hollingshead interposed the first remark in the conversation

In a rather business-like manner, she made the proposition to the girl He would like to engage her, she was supposing the terms in any Patricia were satisfactory

Patricia interposed Hesitatingly, did Miss O'Brien told me all about Mrs Brown She will want to see her

"I can give you the name of my mother's doctor too" Adelaide added

"Then I'll go home with you now," Patricia declared "And you must promise to sing for mother as well as for me. The man who engaged you to sing in the restaurant knows all about you. He can vouch for you

"Oh, no! Please do not say him about me" Adelaide objected persistently "He has done nothing in my favor He has discharged me," she added bitterly

"Discharged you? Why?" the man demanded

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

—By Beatrice Fairfax—

A Suitable Life

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

I am twenty-five and attached to a young man of several years my senior We all like Esther and Sister and I would like to give her some sort of present to remember me by I have been to cons if I have let us drift apart I feel tonight to give her a signet ring but my friends laugh and say that jewelry means more than friendship when given as a present

Will you please advise me what to do and what you would suggest outside of a signet ring If that is not satisfactory

ANGELLO.

WHY anticipate "drifting apart"? However, Christmas is approaching, and any token of a deep friendship will undoubtedly be appreciated Custom is against gifts of jewelry, but a sincere friendship is sometimes a little above mere questions of custom. Why not a handsome set of books instead of the ring, which might suggest more than you want it?

Do You Know That—

Books, however, damaged can now be repaired and missing pages replaced by special treatment, which is, however, very costly

ATTEMPTING TOO MUCH

NO PLAYTIME, SHE CLAIMS

By Loretto C. Lynch

A THOUGHTFUL woman has written me a letter. She confesses that she has no time for play. In other words, she has so planned her life that she has no time for recreation To quote, she says, I wonder if it is possible to put my life on a business basis? Let me place the facts before you.

"I have two babies. One is two years of age, while the other is almost one year of age. I do all my own housework, including washing and ironing, as I cannot afford help. My husband helps me when he can. He is a letter-carrier and is usually home for about one and one half hours between 12 and 2 o'clock in the middle of the day.

Preserving at Night

"In addition to my housework, I do preserving in season with the aid of my husband at night. Then, too, I make all my children's clothes as well as many of the simpler things for myself. I am trying in between times to knit a sweater suit each for the children. The highest of my life, however, is mending my husband's socks. He is on his feet all day long and needs must change his socks daily. It seems I never finish darning socks.

"My home is a four-room apartment, but it has a very large kitchen inconveniently arranged, a nice bedroom and dining room and a very large living room. I am just considering putting the dining room furniture in with the living room and making the dining room into a nursery for the children.

"It seems that I am going all day long, but I can never look around and feel satisfied that there is nothing more to be done. In fact, most times I do not dare to look around

"Am I undertaking too much? We get up between 6 and 6 30 and go to bed most anytime in the evening. The children get to bed by 6 30, when we have our supper. Can you give me any suggestions so that I too may have some leisure?"

Little Ironing.

There should be very little ironing to be done if the proper kind of crepe cloth for dresses and rompers and night dresses, etc., has been selected

The idea of making the little used dining room into a nursery is an excellent one. Screen off part of the large kitchen and put your dining room furniture into it. Put your living room into perfect order and try to always have this one room so orderly that it will be soothing to your tired husband or yourself to spend the evening hour there after dinner. Personally, I find it quite difficult to keep a combination living-dining room in good order. You must make a real time. You must

FINANCE AND BUSINESS

By S. C. FORBES

New York, Jan. 6.—Astonishment has been expressed at the size of the salary the moving picture people have offered Will Hays, America's dynamic Postmaster General. The figure mentioned is $150,000 a year, although the actual amount is probably larger.

• • •

The biggest salary paid any man in America, so far as I have been able to find out, is $750,000 a year. An automobile production expert gets it.

• • •

But a few other executives are paid more than this, not in the form of straight salary, but in salary plus a bonus or a share of profits.

Eugene G. Grace, president of Bethlehem Steel, has received—and is to have fully 2 per cent—shares than $2,000,000 in a boom year and more than $1,000,000 in prosperous years.

Schwab pays no man, I understand, more than $10,000 a year in salary. Everything above that has to be earned by contributing to the making of money for the company.

• • •

The salaries paid Chairman Gary and President Farrell of the United States Steel Corporation are not published. But these brainy men are rewarded according to results. That is, in addition to their fixed salaries, they benefit from profits. Neither, however, is to be classed among our leading multi-millionaires. Judge Gary, it is true, was a wealthy man before the steel corporation was organized, and he is, of course, a millionaire. But he has never indulged in enormous speculative exploits. James A. Farrell has always been an employe, and he has scrupulously refrained from speculating in United States Steel or other stocks, his wealth is limited. Mr. Farrell derives his profit so engrossingly to the affairs of his company that he has neither time nor the slightest inclination to dabble in Wall Street.

John Hays Hammond, the famous mining engineer, was at one time the highest-paid man in America. He had a contract with the Guggenheims which guaranteed him $200,000 a year, for five years. As a matter of fact, the million was well exceeded. $200,000 a year in those days was worth as much as $600,000 a year today.

Some of our bank presidents receive $100,000 a year in salary and a Christmas bonus which sometimes reaches a large figure. The first bank to pass much a bonus each year probably was the National City; Frank A. Vanderlip, who started as a vice-president at $10,000 a year, was the man who rose to $100,000 a year.

I have no doubt that such men as A. D. Wilgus, president of the Chase National Bank; Charles H. Sabin and Charles C. Potter, chairman and president of the Guaranty Trust Company; Gates W. McGarrah, president of the Mechanics and Metals National Bank; Seward Prosser, president of the Bankers Trust Company; Louis E. Pierson, chairman of the Irving National Bank; Walter E. Frew, president of the Corn Exchange Bank; and a few other heads of New York's financial institutions receive as much as $100,000 a year in salary, while Chicago doubtless pays the heads of its two largest institutions, George E. Reynolds, of the Continental and Commercial National Bank, and James B. Fogran, of the First National Bank, six figures a year.

• • •

Only in comparatively recent years have industrial companies gone as high as $100,000 a year for their presidents. Even today not a great many industrial executives receive as much as this in straight salary, but quite a few receive additional compensation, based on profits, which bring their yearly earnings well above the $100,000 mark.

• • •

I do not know of any railroad that pays more than $100,000 a year and only a few of the largest pay as much. Compared with other lines, railroad executives, generally speaking, are not well paid. Moreover, bonuses or profit-sharing plans are rare in railroading.

• • •

As organizations become larger, the tendency is to secure the best possible man as president, no matter what salary it may be necessary to pay. Boards of directors have discovered that one man may be extraordinarily cheap at $100,000 a year or even a good deal more, while the wrong man for the job would be costly at any salary. Never more than in recent years has the importance of having the right kind of executive been forcefully demonstrated. Bankruptcy or solvency has depended in many instances upon the judgment exercised by senior executives.

Men like Samuel Vauclain of Baldwin Locomotive, Charles J. Seger of United States Rubber, Samuel Insull of the Commonwealth Edison Company of Chicago, John D. Ryan of Anaconda Copper, A. R. Erskine of Studebaker, C. A. Coffin of General Electric, E. P. Bedford of Corn Products, William H. Nichols of General Chemical, George Verity of American Rolling Mills, Thomas E. Mitten of Philadelphia Rapid Transit, George F. Johnson of Endicott-Johnson, John H. Raskob of the Dupont-General Motors organizations, and some others are worth to their organizations an amount that could not possibly be measured by any salaries now paid. I recall Coleman Dupont once saying to me that his five highest-paid lieutenants were the most profitable men he employed.

If the moving picture leaders are convinced that Will Hays is the ideal man for them, then it need create no surprise that they are willing to pay him more than $150,000 a year. It he can deliver the goods, he will be cheap at that figure—that is, if he accepts.

PRICE TREND IS ERRATIC IN LAST HOUR

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor

The New York market was irregular at the close, the price trend being erratic in the last hour. Rallies followed reactions. Most stocks were up at the finish. Motors and foreign oils were strong. Domestic petroleums, rails and steels were irregular as to movement. Sugars sold at their highest for the session in the last hour, opening gains were extended. The day's sales at six days' lowest. Trading was less active, transactions approximating 600,000 shares.

Among strongest issues were Mexican Petroleum, Marine preferred, International Corporation and Standard Oil of New Jersey. They were up a point or more. Weakest issues included General Asphalt, Lorillard and Maryland Oil. They were down from one to more than two points.

During the last half of the morning gains were retained or increased and were the rule by the time luncheon was on soon. Advances ranged from fractions to more than two points, with the general motors making the best showing. A slow reaction marked the opening of the afternoon session, and in the afternoon, but a last hour rally took sugars and some other stocks to the highest level of the day. A strong covering movement became general during the morning, when call money was offered at 3½ per cent, the lowest rate in six months, after opening at 4½ per cent. The most convincing sign of greater ease in money was the lowering of the time quotation from 5 per cent. to 4½ per cent. for sixty and sixty-day loans on mixed collateral. This increased expectation that Federal Reserve rediscount rates are to be reduced soon. Foreign exchange rates were brighter at the start.

PRICES MOVED UPWARD.

At the opening the market was irregular with losses outnumbering gains, but offerings were not plentiful as previously this week and ability to absorb stocks that came showed better sentiment. A slow upward movement resulted and at the end of the hour the market had a more convincing tone and could be called fairly strong. But the price movement was rather narrow. Foreign oils were under less pressure but domestic had a weak start. They lagged in the forenoon, but finally participated. Rails were quiet and little was done in this group except to recover some losses. Motors, coppers and tires were steady and equipments rather active. Specialties retained the support previously accorded this week. Steels were neither as strong nor as active as on Wednesday. Some profit taking in Midvale caused it to recede a fraction. Strong specialties were Corn Products and Sears Roebuck. General Asphalt dropped a point while the list in general was moving upward.

REPORTS DISCOURAGING.

Annual reports by several big corporations were issued today and were discouraging. They show losses for 1921, although their operations were on a much larger scale than in 1920, cut to procure orders but it has not been so easy to reduce operating costs. It looks as if there will need to be further readjusting before business can be made profitable. But the selling of stocks this week is deemed liquidation. Although the short interest was very large at the end of the year it has since been greatly extended. The latter fact and the lowering of the money rate has made bears more cautious. There was some covering of the outside interest. The change in the reserve ratio of the Federal Reserve system, it standing at 71.1, the figure of a week ago, on action showed improvement, advancing from 76.1 to 80.1. But New Year balance sheet figures and New Year's ratio to drop from 89.8 to 79.3.

December Copper Sales

In December copper sales in this country totalled 107,000,000, as compared with approximately 198,000,000 for November, 149,000,000 for October and 200,000,000 for September. This would make a total of 542,000,000 pounds for the last four months of 1921.

Public Debt Reduction

In December last this country's public debt was reduced more than $180,000,000. Ordinary receipts for the month totalled $740,292,801 against $321,989,397 for the last 1920 month. Expenditures were $325,765,702 against $404,573,091.

Big Cargo from Germany

The United States liner Hudson has arrived in New York with 4,311 tons of German products, the largest shipment from Germany since 1914. It is valued at $10,000,000 and consists of lace making machinery, skins, hides, furs, toys and crockery.

CHICAGO PASSES FINANCIAL STORM

Bankers Believe Heavy Bank Withdrawals Will Soon Cease

By C. B. EVANS.

(Copyright, 1922, by Public Ledger Co.)

Chicago, Jan. 6.—Not to "smooth things over," but to state a fact as nearly as it can be ascertained, it may be said that the financial situation in Chicago is now perfectly serene. On Wednesday there were disturbing rumors innumerable and the names of several houses, brokers and dealers in securities were on the lips of the gossips.

A leading banker, who is always in the thick of negotiations to dispose of houses not strong, declared that the situation here cleared up and certain acts of his own indicated that he had nothing more to do in that line, at least for the present. Regarding one house supposed to be in a weak position, he said, "There is nothing to report. We would be glad to lend them several hundred thousand dollars."

There appears to have been more withdrawals of deposits from the banks than hardly any one knew. One bank that had been an object of special attention has made a change which appears to be significant. All around and nervous tension is relieved.

This does not obliterate the certainty that there will be further liquidation. Nobody knows better than such banker that the settling up process we have had these months will continue, but there is reason to believe that soon the pace will slacken.

FARMERS TO BE FAVORED.

It is difficult to make any estimate of conditions among the farmers, as they will ever present themselves in the general finance of the country. Protective rather than constructive per se is to be expected in that quarter for a long time to come. Nevertheless the loans of the War Finance Corporation have helped out materially.

So far as concerns the aggregate of the American people there is danger that the government will speculate too much in this direction. But then there will be class legislation and class administration for an interest which indeed should have considerable help but which should not be favored to the hurt of the great mass.

Efforts are now in progress by the "agricultural bloc" to make the title deeds of the land farming of the country the basis of new forms of bank credit. These efforts extend not only to the general protection of the system but to the powers of the administration, that is the selection of individuals who would control the finances of the United States expressed in the Federal Reserve System subordinate to the will of the people. We have seen how these things have gone in past years in the various departments of the government absolutely to the river and harbors bills appropriations for the Mississippi levees, to small country towns and abuse of the privileges of the government printing office is sufficient evidence of the primary climax of dangers lurking in the relation of our banking system to politics.

But whether the condition of the farmers is or is not more hopeful than heretofore, certain it is that no such anxiety exists as to effects in the city of business men and bankers as there as has been seen many times in past months. This is evidenced by the conferences manifestly between customers and the conferences of bankers with one another. They are of frequent occurrence nowadays and later and charged with great anxiety.

Today there is the natural calm of men who have gotten through some unpleasant experiences. "They are through and they have done a good job," is the comment of an observer on what has happened around the turn of the year.

SLOW PRESSURE ON DEBTORS.

The policy now, not only as regards farmers and country banks, but in the case of all sorts of debtors, is to put steady pressure to force the payment of debts, but the creditor knows enough not to crowd matters to the break an important blood vessel unless it is a hopeless case. Along with this is a spirit of tolerance and helpfulness that probably has been seen in American business only before in times of a sudden call of a squeeze could be brought to bear on profiteering retailers a great forward step would be taken, but at that point the liquidators come up against labor costs as well as the avarice of the merchant, for salaries and wages have declined little.

The retailer is our great affliction. It is a true story that is told of a farmer in a remote Illinois town who drove a calf to a butcher shop, sold the animal and left an order for a quarter of the veal. He was charged more for the quarter he bought than he got for the calf he sold.

WALL STREET GOSSIP

By MONITOR

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—Price movements in stocks were extremely confusing yesterday and the general impression was not encouraging. The early action of the market served to stiffen bullish confidence, as several groups were quick to firm and short covering in a few issues was active and urgent. The shorts in American Sugar were put through a most unpleasant quarter of an hour, and covering was on an extensive scale. A good deal of strength also was displayed by Midvale, Republic Iron & Steel and Lackawanna Steel on further gossip concerning the much discussed merger.

THESE were incidents of the morning, however, and the market developed a character from its action in the afternoon. Marked weakness developed among the oil stocks, rails and motors. Studebaker, Baldwin and American Loco dropped sharply. The appeared to be pressure to sell or selling for the account of disappointed buyers. The declaration of General Asphalt was prompted by predictions that the forthcoming statement would make a poor showing in regard to earnings, and that the dividend on the preferred stock would be passed. This is, of course, the merest conjecture, in spite of its confident circulation. The same goes for the rumor that the dividend on International Nickel preferred is in danger, the securities of which company that has been passing through a period of unrealized Asphalt was prompted by adjustment and retrenchment.

AS a matter of fact, the market is under the opposing influence of two factors. One is a revision of the technical position, which evidently has been long overdue after the rise of the last three months. Another is the effect exerted by the conviction that a number of commercial insolvencies is inevitable, something to which the business world already has resigned itself, but which is being made the subject of bearish comment just at a time when the technical position of the market is unsettled.

ASIDE from the delay by the Dail Eireann on the Irish treaty, there appeared to be no news of consequence.

TO say that professional operations dominated the day's trading in stocks is to use a truthful expression which has crept into the daily practice of market commentators, but which may convey an erroneous impression. Were it known definitely for whom large operators are buying and selling it would probably be of much of its significance. Yesterday's price changes were due in large measure to selling by the professional element, but a large volume of stock was accumulated on the theory that the agricultural depression in the great grain belt of the country is nearing its end, and that the revival of wheat values will be followed by a revival of purchasing power in the agricultural districts of Western houses. It was to this factor that the rank and file looked for relief prior to the immediate future of stock prices.

ONE large individual operator was reported to have been responsible for the sudden spurt in Studebaker, and under the cover of strength in this issue to have been a large seller of Baldwin and American Locomotive. The advance of Midvale was accompanied by the threadbare rumor of an extra dividend, and the stockholders' meeting of the corporation which was the proposed merger of the independent companies goes into effect.

THE oils were the weakest features from the opening of the market. General Asphalt was especially weak on the theory that there was some question as to the action to be taken by the directors on the preferred dividend. The preferred sold more than six points, and the common more than two points. Unfavorable dispatches indicating that there is no cause for questioning the payment of the dividend, failed to halt the rush of selling orders. There was evidence of scale buying below par.

A REDUCTION of 10 cents per barrel in the price of bunker oil to $1.40 was reported to have been made by the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, while in other quarters it was said that there were offerings at $1.30. This was taken to foreshadow further reductions in the prices, and played its part in bringing selling into the oil stocks.

SELLING of Cosden was said to have been for the account of a recently formed pool which has acquired an unwieldy line of long stock, according to the statement, and is now in the usual volume, and persisted to the end of the day. Buying came largely from the shorts.

PASSING of the General Motors dividend brought a great deal of outside selling into that stock, and a really some kind of a new low level. There was an excellent market for these offerings, and some firms took the position that the stock is approaching a level where it offers attractive speculative possibilities for the long pull.

THE steel stocks generally were persistently heavy. U. S. Steel in particular was being offered in large quantities. There was no news to account for the selling of these issues specifically, but traders were in a pessimistic frame of mind and finding little support offered these stocks down. One argument advanced for the selling was that the reduction in crude oil prices meant less pipe buying by the oil companies. This class of business has been one of the important factors in recent steel operations, and it was felt that if this buying is curtailed it must reflect in the last quarter statements of the steel companies.

AMERICAN LOCOMOTIVE sold at 100 and there was little indication of "inside" buying even at the low price. Traders generally were inclined to believe that any concentrated speculative position is being undone. Baldwin, a comparatively weak stock, and the fractional rally at the close was due only to the covering of contracts by day's day traders, and not to reflect the last quarter statements of the steel companies.

AMERICAN LOCOMOTIVE sold at 100 and there was little indication of "inside" buying even at the low price. Traders generally were inclined to believe that any concentrated speculative position is being undone. Baldwin, a comparat

U. S. TO PREVENT DEATHS AT RAIL CROSSINGS

Roads Constructed Under New Act to Be Built to Avoid Danger to Life

By Associated Press.

Washington, Jan. 6.—Grade crossings will be eliminated wherever possible and replaced with bridges or underpasses on all roads of the Federal Aid Highway System to be constructed under the Federal Highway Act, the Bureau of Public Roads of the Department of Agriculture announced today.

This policy, the announcement says, is receiving the approval of State and railroad officials and has been indorsed by the American Association of State Highway officials.

Important roads, many of which at present cross and re-cross railroads at grades, hereafter will be built entirely on one side of the railroad, even though this increases cost of construction, or, if crossings are unfavorable for justified by local interests, the road will be designed to pass over or under the track, the railroads, in most instances of this kind, bearing half the cost of building the bridge or underpass.

In the three years ending with 1920, 9,636 lives were lost and 10,649 persons were injured at grade crossings in the United States.

FIRST WOMAN JUROR READY TO SERVE

Mrs. Bertha Cody, Farmer and Lumber Dealer in Berkshires, Will Not Shirk

Pittsfield, Jan. 6.—Mrs. Bertha M. Cady, wife of Dennis A Cady, of the Berkshire town of Windsor, first woman in Massachusetts to be drawn for jury duty, said today she will not seek to be excused from any case on which she may be drawn

"I expect to be at the Superior Court in Pittsfield on January 16," said Mrs. Cady, "ready for any duty I may be asked to perform in connection with jury cases. Now that woman enjoys suffrage I don't believe they should shirk any of its responsibilities. I surely am willing to do my share in helping to maintain society and the government."

In the little town of Windsor, which is on the ridgepole of the commonwealth (2,000 feet elevation), Mrs. Cady has been elected to numerous places of trust and responsibility. She is town library trustee, supervisor of music in the public schools, secretary of the Windsor Grange and lecturer of the Pomona Grange. She is a native of Randolph. Graduate of the Brockton High School, class of 1895, and taught for several years in Stoneham, Hinsdale, West Stockbridge and Windsor. She is forty years of age and has been married fourteen years. Mr. Cady is chairman of the Windsor School Committee and is a prominent farmer and lumber dealer.

The most interesting case scheduled for trial at the January sitting is that of Philip E. Schroeder, Pittsfield diamond merchant, who was indicted in January, 1921, on a charge of larceny of $140,000 worth of gems from his store.

ROXBURY YOUTH IS KILLED BY GAS

Lawrence E. Barrett, nineteen years old, was found dead in his bed in his home at No. 2 Wyoming street, Roxbury, when his father, Frank Barrett, entered the room to speak to him. A tube on a gas stove had become disconnected. Death is believed to have been accidental.

21 Died on Creek Ship

Athens, Jan. 6.—The number of persons killed in the explosion on the Greek torpedo boat destroyer Lonchi at Piraeus Wednesday is given as twenty-one, with forty-two injured. The explosion occurred while a member of the crew was handling a submarine bomb.

To Discuss Five-Cent Fares

We Should Have Them as Soon as Possible and Public Should Know the Situation as It Is

The United Improvement Association, at a meeting at the Boston City Club Wednesday evening, voted to ask the public managers of our Boston Traction System for a public hearing between January 15 and February 1, upon the question of establishing a flat five-cent fare on all of the company's lines. The association "asks for such a hearing in order that there may be a full and complete discussion of all the facts concerning the matter of fares on the Elevated's lines."

This is a wise action and it ought to lead to a great deal of public enlightenment on the question of the five-cent fare. As a matter of social and economic advantage, we ought to get back to a five-cent fare as soon as we can. We ought to let the people know just what the situation is, what is the nature of the management of our public management of our street railways, who appoints the public managers, to whom they are responsible; what interest the old private managers have, if any, in the street railway; what interest the old stockholders have in it, if any, and how the control of our street railway differs from the control of our public schools, our public streets, our parks, our water and our sewerage systems, if there is any difference.

The recent city election has revealed a most amazing ignorance on the part of the people of this city concerning the public management of our street railways. Men who took the public platform in the campaign and set themselves up as instructors of the people either proved to be astonishingly dishonest or astonishingly ignorant about a matter which ought to be common knowledge.

The public managers themselves have failed, we fear, to appreciate the importance to public officials of the Eleventh Commandment that a public official must not only BE right but SEEM to be right in the public mind; that it is a part of the duty of the public official so to keep the public informed of his work that the public will understand and appreciate it.

Our public managers of the Boston Elevated Street Railway system, relying upon the rectitude of their intentions, have not been successful in keeping the public informed of the character of their service and of their relations to the public. They have not made the people understand that they are just as much public managers as the School Committee are public managers in the schools, as the Metropolitan Park Commission are public managers of the parks, as the Superintendent of Streets is the public manager of the streets and as the Superintendent of Sewers is the public manager of the sewers.

They have not told us so that we will understand it that our street railway is as much in the control of the public today as our parks or our schools or our streets, and that in order for private interests to get back the control of our street railways they would have to get passed practically the same laws as would have to be passed to turn our schools or our parks or our streets over to private companies. They have not taught the public, probably because they assumed that the public knew that the stockholders of the street railway company have little more interest in the earnings of the street railway or in the size of the fare than a man who owns a Liberty bond has in the income of the government.

Governor Has Courage

Challenges County Ring in Spite of Perilous Position of the Republican Party in State and Nation

We cannot but admire the courage which Governor Cox exhibits in his inaugural message when he throws down the challenge to the Republican County Ring. This challenge is in the form of a renewed demand of State control of certain county institutions.

Quite aside from the consideration of the wisdom of the proposal, it is certain that it took a good deal of political courage to make it originally and to renew it now. It is conceded on all hands that the Republican Party is in shallow water, surrounded by rocks, on a lee shore with the adverse winds rising to the proportions of a gale. All the elections this Fall indicate a tremendous disconten against the Republican Party. Anger at the apostacy and failures and weaknesses of the Republican administration at Washington is spreading out to the farthest reaches of the Republican organization. Added to that is a class feeling which is beginning to run high in the country and which will affect the Republican Party more than anything else.

The Republican organizations have always been the Praetorian Guards or the Swiss Guards of the Republican party. For a Republican Governor to offend them takes about as much hardihood as it took an old Roman Emperor to offend his Praetorians or a Bourbon King his Swiss Guards. It took ordinary courage to defy the Republican county organizations in the palmy days of the Republican Party. It takes more than ordinary courage to defy them now, for these are by no means palmy days for the Republican Party in this State. But we honor Governor Cox for the courage of his convictions, and if he is right, as he probably is, we wish him success and hope that his enemies will not find that he has an Achilles heel.

More Light on Russia

Boston people have an opportunity tonight to listen to an inside story of actual conditions in Russia from a source much more satisfactory than either the familiar hysterical denunciation of refugees and panic-stricken plutocrats or the rarer overcolored pictures of Communist enthusiasts.

At Ford Hall, Mrs. Clare Sheridan (an English artist and writer whose descent on the mother's side from John Lothrop Motley gives her a special claim upon the sympathies of a Boston audience similar to that which she receives across the water from her near relationship to the Winston Churchills and her husband's direct descent from Richard Brinsley Sheridan of the "School for Scandal") will tell for the benefit of the Russian Relief Fund her experiences while modelling busts and statues of Lenine, Trotsky and other leaders of the Bolshevik revolution, and of the heart-rending scenes she witnessed as she passed through the famine-stricken districts of Russia on her return to England.

The protracted and informal opportunities which her artistic employment gave her of studying Lenine both in his brief intervals of leisure and in his official capacity left her with an estimate of his abilities as a statesman and of his private character surprisingly different from the mental picture which his name calls up in the minds of most Americans, but it may for all that be much nearer the ultimate verdict of history. Certainly her Ford Hall audience will not experience many dull moments.

NELLIE BLY ON MOTHERS WHO NAG

By Nellie Bly

THE mother who nags is the mother without influence.

Some mothers who have evidently been badly brought up themselves, strive to obtain obedience from their children by threatening. These threats are more or less vicious, depending upon the status of the parent. I have heard mothers in tenement houses threaten their children, saying that if they don't do this or did do that, they would cut their ears off or spank them within an inch of their lives, or beat them until they couldn't sit down or similar terrifying threats. And their children, without exception, were the most unruly, ill-behaved children I have ever seen.

I have known mothers of good standing and education who were totally lacking in their ideas of enforcing obedience from their children, who sought by foolish remarks to command respect for their wishes.

Threats Are Foolish

If a child displeased them, they would say: "You will be sorry for this some day when you have no mother," or, "When your mother is dead and gone you will then remember how bad you were," or, "Some day you'll wish you had a mother."

All of which only incites opposition and suggests the idea to the child that it wouldn't grieve terribly if the direful things the mohter predicted were to come about.

Still other mothers think by threatening a child with punishment they can gain obedience. The child soon learns that the threats are empty ones, and, of course, its disrespect and disobedience increase accordingly.

As children grow older they are ashamed of a nagging mother. Even the love which the environment and contact instil in a child is killed by constant nagging as they grow older. Children are as imitative as monkeys. They copy their elders in every detail. They learn quickly to threaten and to say, "I won't and I don't." They soon give back what they get.

If they receive threats they give threats, just as if they receive slaps they retaliate by slapping. If the child is bad it is made so either by ignorance or mismanagement of the parents. An illy fed child, an unhealthy child or a child that is overloaded with heavy clothing cannot be good.

A child that is constantly blamed and accused of doing things becomes hardened and indifferent. Its first feelings of injury from unjust accusation rapidly die away and it becomes resentful and sullen, but never remorseful. It simply gets ugly and doesn't care.

One cannot be too careful in the training of children. Their whole future depends upon their early impressions. These last during their entire life, serving either to aid or to injure. What a mother may say in haste and anger and forget again in a moment a child will remember a lifetime.

I have in my care a little girl who, at the age of four, was abused by her mother. She remembers every incident, and it is a lesson to one in the care of children to bear her talk of those days.

"Do I ever have to go back to my mother?" she asked me one day. When I asked her "why," she continued:

I considered a moment whether I had a right to ask her confidence or whether it was wiser to change the subject, but I finally said: "Do you want to tell me why?" She replied:

"One time I found some money. I don't know how much it was and I don't remember where I found it. But my mother took the money from me and slapped me so that I fell down the stairs, and I remember some woman picked me up and said she thought I was killed. Then, another time, my mother gave me some spaghetti to eat. I don't know what I did, but she picked me up and threw me against the wall and made my nose bleed. Then she often hit me with her hair brush, and every time my nose would bleed I don't like to think of those things, and I'd rather not go back to my mother."

Sorry should be the mother who leaves such unhappy impressions in the mind of her child, memories the child will carry to her grave, diminishing as it must, even perhaps killing the love and respect she should have for the one who bore her.

Here is a letter from a son:

"Dear Miss Bly—Your interesting letters in the Boston American encourage me to write you. Why do mothers nag their children? Do you think that a mother really loves her children when she keeps reminding them of all the unpleasant things that happened years ago when they were babies?

"Is a son or daughter responsible their whole lives long, for an unhappy marriage of their mother's? Should they be blamed because their father treated her badly? Should their minds have been poisoned against their father, whom they have never met?

"At the least little misunderstanding, they are reproached with things with which they had nothing to do. They are told over and over, whenever they displease their mother, that they are exactly like their father, and they have been made to believe that that father was the worst person in the whole world.

"The consequence is that the daughter, now a young woman, is a nervous wreck, and the son, who has gone away from home, always dreads his mother's visits.

"The mother is oversensitive, and tears are always ready to flow. She thinks she is the most abused person in the world, and she tells everybody so on every occasion. If there is any reply to her raving, then she is being abused and insulted.

"Now, dear Miss Bly, don't you think it would have been better for this mother to teach her children to love her and never to have let them know their father's mistakes?

"Sincerely, D. W."

The Crying Mother

The most trying of all mothers is the crying mother. There are many of them. They have evidently never outgrown a bad baby habit. A mother who will abuse a father to his children is a very unwise person. She only belittles herself in the estimation of her children, for naturally they will reason that if she nags them all of the while, perhaps the father was not so much to blame for whatever he did.

A child who is early taught to be ashamed of his parents is robbed of half his strength in life, for children need a belief and pride in their parents to help them succeed in this world. The most unhappy child is the child who cannot hold up his head among other children and who must listen to slurs hurled against his parnets.

Arguing is positively the worst method that can be used with children, either small or big. It should be avoided under all circumstances. Arguments lead to nothing but ill-feeling and hatreds. They are disastrous even among grown people, and most positively should never be indulged in with little ones.

The best way for a mother to decide how to treat her children is to put herself in the place of the child and consider what would have had a good or bad effect upon her. If she reasons in this way she cannot go far astray.

If you desire to have good children never nag, never threaten, never reproach, never call names.

GIRL BLUFFS ON PERSONS OF SOCIAL RANK

By Winifred Black

Copyright, 1921, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

"JIMMY called me up the other day," said she.

And he was almost respectful to her for a few minutes, for Jimmy is a very great man, indeed—position, reputation, power, money—all these things has Jimmy.

I happen to know that he didn't call the lady up at all. His secretary called her up and asked her if she remembered the address of a certain woman she had met at a certain Summer resort.

"The chief wants to get into communication with her," said the secretary, and that's all there was to it.

"How do I know?"

A Cheap, Common Trick

Oh, I just happened to be at the other end of the telephone and heard what the secretary said.

Do I know Jimmy, the rich, the powerful, the distinguished?

Most people don't, when I come to think of it.

The woman at the restaurant table never called him Jimmy in her life—to his face—and the man she was with would scarcely know him if he should see him in the street.

Bluffing about friends they have and places they've been, and things they know, and rents they pay, and orders they take, and money they put in the bank, and money they earn, and letters they get, and attentions that are showered upon them.

What Good Does It Do?

"So-and-so offered me $5,000 a year more than I am getting. I kind of like the old shop, and I think I'll stick around."

"Mrs. De Quincy — oh, I've known her for years—sweet woman, isn't she?—a bit faded now, don't you think?"

And all the time they know and we all know that there isn't a word of truth in what they say.

What's it all for—what good does it do—why not better off for all the brag and the bluster and pretense?

Poor Jimmy—he's a lonesome sort of chap, really. People are all afraid of him, just because he is rich and powerful and distinguished.

He's a queer fellow—I don't believe anyone has heard him say somebody he hardly knows by a pet name.

Of course, he doesn't have to impress people with his wide acquaintance or his journeys around the world or his money in the bank.

Jimmy—Jim—how do people like the man and the woman in the restaurant who were so familiar with the name of one they scarcely knew, keep from bursting out laughing right in each other's faces?

To the Editor

Help the Horse

Editor Boston American:

The Mayor has appointed a committee—without pay, we hasten to observe—whose object is to procure co-operation with the Public Works Department in making icy and slippery streets safe for horses. The city does its best in this direction, but it has an immense area to cover, and cannot cover it all in an hour or one day.

We are authorized to assure private citizens that for this purpose they may lawfully place sand or clean ashes, that is, ashes unmixed with garbage, on the street in front of their premises; and we beg that they will do so. We appeal especially to owners or occupants of large buildings, such as banks, churches, stores, hotels, public halls, office buildings, factories and warehouses; but we appeal also to the individual householder.

If there is a bad spot in front of your premises, roll out a barrel of ashes, or carry out a bod and cover the dangerous place. This is a hard Winter. Last week hundreds of horses fell on the ice, many were painfully injured, several were killed where they lay. We employ one paid inspector, and should be glad to receive volunteer assistance.

The office of the Boston Workhorse Relief Association is at No. 161 High street, room 10. Our telephone is Main 720.

H. G. BIRD, Secretary.

DO NOT BE "FERNINST" IF YOU CAN HELP IT

By Dr. Charles Fleischer

SOME persons are always "ferninst." It appears that they cannot help it. They are "built" that way.

Very much like the verdant Hibernian of the popular story. Fresh from the old sod, soon after landing he hailed a New York policeman and inquired what the government was.

When asked why he wanted to know, he answered: "Whatever it is, O'm ferninst it!"

His kind is legion. There are hosts of men and women who are temperamentally against—whatever is or whatever is proposed. Almost it seems as if, according to them whatever IS is wrong and whatever is newly proposed is a device of the devil.

Obviously, these are not all of one group. The ferninsters are in two classes, one opposing the existing order—whether social, political, economic, religious and so on; the other equally strenuously opposed to any change in that order.

Together, those temperamental millions might be informally included in a vast, world-wide association which, for want of a worse name, we could label with the inelegant title of International Growlers' Association.

Another Diatribe

What stirred the writer's gentle wrath to this explosion was the reading of another diatribe by an habitual female distriber. This woman has been busy for a dozen years in the role of Mrs. Partington sweeping back the irresistible tide of equal suffrage.

She foresaw endless disaster to society, if women risked the loss of their sex by casting a ballot. Now the spectre of "feminism" haunts her, because there is some talk at Washington about subsidizing motherhood.

She finds sufficient condemnation of the proposal in the fact that Russia and Germany, bolshevism and socialism practice or favor such a subsidy.

Who knows, perhaps much practical benefit and the inspiration of fine example will flow to America from even socialism and bolshevism and Germany and Russia!

Despite the well-meaning, temperamental ferninsters, whose opposition increases the difficulties of social progress, society will duly become sufficiently interested in its supply of human stuff to safeguard its motherhood.

Not to speak any more tenderly of children and mothers, such protection would only be enlightened social self-interest.

However, that is another story, and we are here concerned only with the ferninsters, female and male.

The other class are a great and growing mass of opponents to the existing order. Far from being satisfied, they are more nearly true to type for—like the original Pat—"whatever it is, O'm ferninst it."

They exhibit the greatest glee over their own performance of childish irresponsibility, exploiting mainly in private protest against capitalism democracy, religion, and what IS—the while they accept profit, place and power from the existing order.

Find No Pleasure

They live and thrive in capitalistic, democratic America, but they find no pleasure therein. And they have no praise for our institutions or our efforts; but they extol the wildest dreams of bolshevistic Russia as though these were already triumphing achievements, which only plutocratic propaganda prevents our accepting and emulating.

Again, these are merely casual examples of a vast class of unorganized individuals whose temperament, speech and activity can only be characterized in the unpleasant but expressive phrase, mess-fed ferninsters.

Now, don't you be a ferninster—professional or amateur—if you can help it.

Certainly, there is much in the social order which needs to be changed. And it will be changed—gradually—as public opinion, the totality of private opinions, changes. And not more quickly.

Again, it is clear that many proposed reforms have merit. As their merit becomes obvious—and the ferninster does much to make this evident—it is inevitable that these reforms will be incorporated into the existing order.

As a responsible democrat, you should not be always for, not always against, things as they are.

But you should be a supporter of social stability—willing to accept the fact, that, like train schedules and circus bills, it is subject to change.
